Politics, Protest, and Empowerment in Digital Spaces

Part of the Advances in Electronic Government, Digital Divide, and Regional Development Book Series

Yasmin Ibrahim (Queen Mary, University of London, UK)

Description:

With the ubiquitous nature of modern technologies, they have been inevitably integrated into various facets of society. The connectivity presented by digital platforms has transformed such innovations into tools for political and social agendas.

Politics, Protest, and Empowerment in Digital Spaces is a comprehensive reference source for emerging scholarly perspectives on the use of new media technology to engage people in socially- and politically-oriented conversations and examines communication trends in these virtual environments. Highlights relevant coverage across topics such as online free expression, political campaigning, and online blogging.

Readers:

This book is ideally designed for government officials, researchers, academics, graduate students, and practitioners interested in how new media is revolutionizing political and social communications.

Topics Covered:

- Gender Equality
- Mobile Technology
- Online Blogging
- Online Free Expression
- Policy Decision-Making
- Political Campaigning
- Political Participation
- Transmedia Storytelling

Hardcover + Free E-Book:  E-Book Only:

$180.00  $180.00

Order Information
Phone: 717-533-8845 x100
Toll Free: 1-866-342-6657
Fax: 717-533-8661 or 717-533-7115
Online Bookstore: www.igi-global.com
Table of Contents

Chapter 1
Self and the Relationship with the Screen: Interrogating the Fictive and Banal in Self Production
An exploration of how we co-produce the self through the banality of the everyday as well as a wider imagination and engagement with the world.
Yasmin Ibrahim

Chapter 2
Using the Blogosphere to Promote Disputed Diets - The Swedish Low-Carb High-Fat Movement
This study explores how three of the leading promoters transact their criticisms of nutrition authorities, and how they use social media for this purpose.
Christopher Holmberg

Chapter 3
Transmedia Storytelling Impact on Government Policy Change
The impact of transmedia campaigns aimed at achieving a certain level of government policy change in discussed in this Chapter.
Renira Rampazzo Gambarato and Sergei Andreevich Medvedev

Chapter 4
The Demobilizing Potential Of Conflict For Web and Mobile Political Participation
The idea that conflict avoidance (CA)can inhibit online political participation and expression is deliberated in this study.
Francis Dalisay, Matthew Kushin and Masahiro Yamanoto

Chapter 5
Political Messaging in Digital Spaces: The case of Twitter in Mexico’s Presidential Campaign
Political messaging is adapting to new digital spaces but its limits of empowerment for citizens remains ambiguous.
Rodrigo Sandoval-Almazan

Chapter 6
ICTs as Ancillary tools for indirect democracy?
In retaining online direct democracy as its focus, it explores whether citizens do indeed have the opportunities to vote more in local policy decision making.
Kerill Dunne

Chapter 7
Towards a Political Theory of eLearning
This study focuses on the political strategies that are utilized in the context of eLearning.
Celia Romm Livermore, Pierluigi Rippa, Mahesh Raisinghani

Chapter 8
Challenging the Repoliticization of Food Poverty: Austerity Food Blogs
Austerity food blogs merge narratives of lived experience, food practices and political commentary in ways that challenge the dominant views on poverty so re-politicize it.
Anita Howarth, Brunel

Chapter 9
Ubiquitous Food Imaging: Food images as Digital Spectacle
Our consumption cultures in many ways celebrate the notion of the exhibit and the spectacle inviting gaze through everyday objects and rituals with food as a vital part of this imagination.
Yasmin Ibrahim

Chapter 10
Dealing with Internet trolling in political online communities: Towards the This Is Why We Can’t Have Nice Things Scale

Chapter 11
Do Campaigns “Go Negative” on Twitter?
The use of negative ads in traditional election campaigns has been well-documented, but we know little about the use of Twitter to “go negative.”
Marija Bekafigo and Allison Clark Pingley

Chapter 12
When Citizens in Authoritarian States Use Facebook for Social Ties but not Political Participation
Facebook as platform for citizens to challenge the power of the state, provide alternative narratives and mobilise for political change is assessed through a case study of Uganda.
Wairagala Wakabi

Chapter 13
Online free expression and its gatekeepers
This Chapter covers challenges posed to online free expression at the time of global telecommunication services and by assessing prerogative of private global companies.
Joanna Kulesza

Chapter 14
Exploring the counting of ballot papers using ‘Delegated Transferable Vote’:
Implications for local and national elections in the United Kingdom
This Chapter discusses how DTV might work in practice through an auto-ethnographic approach in which the authors play an active part in elections in order to test the approach.
Jonathan Bishop and Mark Beech

Chapter 15
Women Can’t Win: Gender Irony and the E-Politics of The Biggest Loser
The critical rhetorical analysis of mainstream and social media finds some support for the Women Can’t Win thesis that women are in a Catch-22 situation, trapped between fat-shaming and skinny-shaming.
Michael S Bruner and Karissa Valine

Chapter 16
Critical Issues on Gender Equality and ICTs in Latin America
This Chapter analyses some of the critical issues on gender equality and ICTs in Latin America.
Aimée Vega Montiel,

Chapter 17
Food Photography, Pixelated Produce and Cameraless Images: A Photographic Journey from Farmville to Kheti Badi
An exploration of hyper artificial and unphotographic images revealing the constructed nature of interface between material consumerism and what we consume advertising dreamscapes.
Aileen blaney

Chapter 18
eLearning Political Strategies - A Four Act Play
This Chapter outline the rules that govern the application of political strategies in the context of eLearning listing some of the theoretical and practical implications fora better understating of the politics of eLearning.
Celia Romm Livermore, Pierluigi Rippa, Mahesh Raisinghani