Over the past decade, computer-enhanced learning has increased in demand due to developments in technological aids such as multimedia presentation and the Internet. In this age of technology, it is imperative for teachers to consider the importance of technological integration in the classroom.

Applied E-Learning and E-Teaching in Higher Education presents international practices in the development and use of applied e-learning and e-teaching in the classroom in order to enhance student experience, add value to teaching practices, and illuminate best practices in the area of e-assessment. This innovative title provides fresh insight into e-learning and e-teaching practices while exploring the varying roles of academic staff in adoption and application.

Subject:
IT Education; Web Technologies; Human Aspects of Technology; Mobile/Wireless Computing; Multimedia Technology

Market:
This essential publication is for all academic research libraries, as well as those involved in education, best practices in e-learning; multimedia technologies, and the integration of technology into the classroom. Academics, researchers, practitioners, and students with related interests will also find this publication useful.

About the Editors:

Roisin Donnelly has over 15 years of experience in higher education both as a lecturer and researcher. She has taught in universities in Northern Ireland and was a lecturer and visiting research fellow in the University of New South Wales, Sydney. She is currently programme co-ordinator for DIT’s MSc applied e-learning, and tutors and supervises on the PG certificate, diploma and MA in third level learning and teaching. She has a range of chapter and journal publications to reflect her teaching and research interests, including academic development, designing e-learning, supporting virtual communities, tranformative pedagogies, and blended problem-based learning.

Fiona McSweeney lectures in developmental psychology and research methods in the Department of Social Sciences of the Dublin Institute of Technology and in the psychology of learning and research methods with Waterford Institute of Technology. She has also worked as a learning development officer in the DIT. Her research interests focus on the student experience of higher education, assessment, the impact of professional education on identity, academic mentoring and the use of VLEs as a support for student learning, and engagement in education. She is currently undertaking an EdD with The Open University on student and professional identity and support.
