I am deeply grateful for several individuals for their advice and help. Dr. James. W. Begun at the University of Minnesota, always my mentor and advisor, offered valuable advice when I first embarked on this project. Tom Charland of Merchant Medicine gave me access to the invaluable retail clinic database that he has collected and invited me on several occasions to attend the ConvUrgent Care Symposium in which I gained valuable insight on the industry. Thirteen key informants (Dr. Ateev Mehrotra, Mr. Kevin Palattao, Mrs. Lauren Cates, Dr. Lee Resnick, Mr. Mark Clayton, Mr. Steven Jones, Mr. Steven Lazzari, Mrs. Tammy Mallow, Dr. Bill Rice, Dr. Tom Pascuzzi, and Mr. Webster Golinkin) were very gracious and agreed to share their expertise and time with me. Austin De Marco, the Managing Editor at IGI, was instrumental in keeping me on track for hard and soft deadlines. My previous boss, Professor Mary Stefl, and my current boss, Professor Edward Schumacher, at the Department of Health Care Administration at Trinity University were very supportive and understanding in terms of the time demands that this project required. Graduate Research Assistants at the Department of Health Care Administration at Trinity University, Kelsey Goodell, Nousha Parkhill, and Annemarie Witecki, provided vital research support for various parts of this book.

My parents deserve much of the credit and my gratitude to them is infinite. Finally, I am always indebted to the countless blessings of the Almighty God for the accomplishment of this and any other project in my life.
