Acknowledgment

We would like to acknowledge and thank all of those people who were involved in the development of this book over the past few years. This has been a challenging project in that the subject domain was heretofore largely undocumented in any thorough manner. While many practitioners have experience in the field, only a small, but quality number were able to put fingers to keyboards and write eloquently on the topic. We would, therefore, thank the authors who contributed their experiences, expertise, research, and time to produce this important collection. Your contributions were given altruistically, and without them, it is certain that the topic would remain in our tacit knowledge for a bit more time.

We would also like to thank the editors and reviewers who assisted with the detailed and thoughtful editorial and peer reviews. Your carefully considered input was a sure sign of professional dedication to the craft and has made this a better product as a result.

Finally, there are many people who we should acknowledge for their patience and support during this process, and above all, these are the fine people at IGI Global. Specifically, a thank-you goes to Hayley Kang who has guided us in our last approach to the landing. We would also be remiss if we did not remember to thank our spouses and families, who were always there for us, even when we were focused on other things.

Susan McIntyre
Defence Research and Development, Canada

Kimiz Dalki
McGill University, Canada

Perry Paul
Lessons Learned Consultant, Canadian Armed Forces (Retired), Canada

Irene Kitimbo
McGill University, Canada