The author would like to acknowledge the help of all involved in the review process of the book, without whose support the project could not have been satisfactorily completed. Deep appreciation and gratitude goes to Dr. Steven McNamara, Professor of Business Law, for his feedback and support. In addition, sincere appreciation goes to all business graduate and undergraduate students at the various universities of Lebanon who have participated in the business surveys and in data collection for the various studies mentioned in this book.

Sincere thanks go to all those who provided constructive and comprehensive reviews for their unwavering support. Gratitude goes to my colleagues at the Olayan School of Business at the American University of Beirut, also to my venerable dean, Dr. El Fakhani, at the School of Business in the Lebanese American University, whose enthusiasm motivated me to initially accept the invitation to take on this project. Special thanks also go to the publishing team at IGI Global, USA, whose contributions throughout the whole process, from inception of the initial idea to final publication, have been invaluable.

Special thanks go to my immediate family, whose unconditional love and vibrant energy have kept me going against all odds. My loving gratitude goes to the genius and spirited company of Alma, Yara, Naim, and especially, Wadih, who has also helped me in the final editing of the manuscript. And last but not least, my better half, Nathalie, has kept us all pointed in the right direction aiming for nothing less than the stars through her unfailing support and steady encouragement during the months and years it took to give birth to this book.

In closing, I wish to thank all my friends and foes alike for their valuable insights and for their excellent competitive minds. I hope this book will bring a lasting impact of making our business world and our daily lives better than we found them.

Philippe Zgheib
Lebanese American University, Lebanon
August 2014