Whenever I write a thank you page, I always hope I don’t forget anyone! This book wouldn’t have been possible without an entire team of people. Yes, it’s an old song and an old cliché, but all of you really are the wind beneath my wings.

This idea began when a friend and colleague, Barbara Danielski, and I sat at an outdoor café near the water and over lunch discussed the power of patients sharing journals of their symptoms and pain with clinicians. Barbara became an educated patient during her experiences with cancer. Because of the tragedy of cancer, Barbara did not live to read these words. Neither did my uncle, Steve Bird. While I can visit my grandma, Mary Ann Kepler, as soon as I move my cats Lucy and Andy off the computer keyboard and finish typing this sentence, she will most likely not be here to hold the published book in her hands. Their stories, as well as the stories I read while editing this book, motivate me to continue my quest of providing health education while simultaneously encouraging patients and clinicians to build collaborative partnerships.

Thanks to my editor at IGI, Hayley Kang, and the rest of the publishing team who took a chance on a unique academic publication. As soon as I have an idea for my next book, I know exactly who to call. Thanks also to all the authors of chapters in this book for sharing your research and stories.

I don’t have enough words to share my gratitude for my Editorial Board. I truly feel I put together a dream team of intelligent and creative friends who never hesitated to help me with whatever needed to be done. Whether reading papers, offering advice, or cheering me to succeed with words of encouragement, this book happened because of Andrea Asciutto-Houck, Jennifer Kabis, Cassandra Kenski, Melissa Lucrezia, Marianne Robin Russo, Ryan Urenda, Eric Wanner, and Louise Waterfield. Thanks also to your families for their kind words during this project!

I feel blessed to belong to an amazing family who encourages my dreams and makes me feel I can do anything. Thanks to my dad, Dann Bird, for teaching me that for birds, the sky is the limit! Much love to Diane McLoughlin, Susie Perry, Bill DeBeck, Robin Perry, David Bird, Patricia Bird, Melissa Bird, Derek Bird, Gabrielle Bird, Marsha Bird, Sandy Bridges, Joanna Claridge, Mike Bridges, Carl Claridge, Erica Younkvich, Daniel Younkvich, Margaret Earl, Tim Earl, Michael Schafer, Cher Schafer, Benjamin Schafer, Crystal Schafer, Arthur Bruggisser, Brian Bruggisser, Amanda Bruggisser, the O’Connor family, and all the new kids in the family!
This book also became possible because of the support of all my friends, colleagues, and students throughout the years. The names are too numerous to mention in this space, which shows me how much I mean to a lot of people, and please know that I thank you for being part of my life and appreciate the role each one of you played in my life's journey.

And to my mom, Marilyn Kepler Bird, for being my inspiration and my guardian angel.
