Acknowledgment

We thank all the contributors to this book for granting us the privilege to guide them in the process of publishing their important and timely research studies and reflections on informal learning. We appreciate the enthusiasm shown by our editorial advisory board members, the useful leads they provided during the project, and the insightful comments that all the reviewers offered during the blind review process. All the reviewers had to give of their time, including at times several hours from their vacations to attend to the review of the chapters. We thank the editorial and production teams at IGI for supporting this publication. Olúfẹ́mi Táíwò would like to thank Olutoyin Mejuni for inviting his participation in this project in the first place and Patricia Cranton for being such a tremendous person to work with, and both of them for being so generous and a double joy to work with. Finally, Olutoyin and Patricia would like to thank Olúfẹ́mi for his practical and down-to-earth responses to all of the issues that came up in editing a volume of this size. He also hit on just the right way to word something when they were struggling.

Olutoyin Mejuni
Obafemi Awolowo University, Nigeria

Patricia Cranton
University of New Brunswick, Canada

Olúfẹ́mi Táíwò
Cornell University, USA