Acknowledgment

We would like to express appreciation of family, friends, and colleagues who supported and encouraged this project, which resulted in publication of the Handbook of Research on Advancing Critical Thinking in Higher Education. We would like to thank publisher IGI Global and editorial assistants Caitlyn Martin and Allison McGinnis, for informational support, guidance, and patience.

We thank members of our Advisory Board, Dean Cynthia Bice, Toni Gallia, Jennifer O’Malley, Beth Kania-Gosche, Kelly Leavitt, and Chryssa Sharp for valued support, creative consultation, and help with recruitment of potential contributors. We value the time given and feedback provided by our reviewers, Yvonne Gibbs, Stephen Sherblom, Nancy Watson-Weir, Graham Weir, and Nathan Wisdom. We especially appreciate the time provided by those who filled dual roles. Advisory Board members and contributing authors joined in the review process and increased the efficiency of the double-blind review of chapter submissions.

The diversity and wide range of perspectives represented in the chapter submissions for this handbook, along with representation from regions around the globe exceeded our expectations as co-editors. We enjoyed the readings, and simultaneously met the needs of our natural tendency towards lifelong learning. Thank you to our contributing authors for their talents, efforts, and hard work in preparing the contributed chapters.

And finally, thank you to Assistant Dean Terry Stewart for conversations concerning critical thinking and his expressions of its importance to education in writing the Foreword for the Handbook of Research on Advancing Critical Thinking in Higher Education.
