Acknowledgment

We need to acknowledge the kind help received during work on this project. Especially, without the authors and reviewers that took part in the review process, this book would have been impossible. Some deserve mention by name. Many thanks go to Luis Pereira, Lorenzo Magnani, Woosuk Park, as well as my bothers Aaron and Justin White for their patient review of either chapters appearing in this text, long often erudite emails at all hours and on all subjects, or both, throughout the year 2014 as this project was coming together. Axel Gelfert deserves mention for his support, as do other members of the Editorial Advisory Board such as Edward Moad for always keeping his door open and Jared Gassen for going above and beyond on his own dime, Jun Tani for helping me to understand some important things recently. Ron Sun deserves unique thanks for taking on a still fuzzy and disaffected philosophy student so many years ago, for citing his work so many years later, and for his patient discourse over the bridge of time. Our thanks also go out to Phil Torres who provided insightful feedback on multiple occasions, and Haewon Seo deserves thanks for taking care of everything except for this book. Finally, James Hughes deserves special mention for allowing us to reach out to fellow writers through the Institute for Ethics and Emerging Technology. Along with these people, so many others have in one way or another helped to make this project possible from conception to realization, that to mention them all would require another book on the matter. It must be enough to note that their continued support is our great and lasting fortune. Thank you all.
