Acknowledgment

The process of writing this book has been a long and interesting journey into the relative unknown world of academic publishing. Had I realized what was involved in taking on the task of sole editor of an academic book, I would have stalled at the gate, but that is a story for another book. I am grateful for what I have learned along the way and the many wonderful people I have met from around the world. This book is the first step in realizing my aim to define the field of Gender Economics and I would like to thank the many people who have shown interest and expressed their support, sometimes via social media and sometimes in person. Thank you!

I would like to acknowledge the help and support of the many people I have met throughout this journey, and specifically to the authors that completed the project in the tight timeframes and to those that didn’t; I thank you. Without all of you this book would not have developed in the way that it has, and when I read the quality of the chapters, I am excited that this valuable research will be published in this book. Thank you to the tireless work of the authors and the reviewers that took part in the review process, without their support, this book would not have become a reality.

I would like to thank each one of the authors for their contributions and I extend my sincere gratitude to each of the chapter’s authors who contributed their time and expertise to this book, your work is valuable and very much appreciated and it is an honor to have it included here. I thank you for your faith in me to deliver a book that is worthy of your research and insights.

I would also like to acknowledge the valuable contributions of the reviewers regarding the improvement of quality, coherence, and content presentation of chapters. Most of the authors also served as referees and I highly appreciate their double task.

What I have come to notice most about this process is the way that the international team of authors worked so well together. From my end it seemed like a cohesive team with a clear focus and mission. I also want to thank Rachel from IGI Global for your invaluable support, particularly as we inched toward the hard deadline in the last week.

Many of my associates and friends worked with me throughout the last year to work out the pathway forward, and still others offered their continued support during the long process of writing and review. There are so many people to thank, but I would like to name but a few here. Penny Dobson, Africa Zanella, Gail Romero, Professor Patrice Braun, and Professor Peter Kreisler, thank you!
Acknowledgment

Finally, this book would not have been possible without the help and support of my children, Alli, Lyndon and Tamika – thank you for your encouragement and your absolute belief that ‘I could do it’ when my own self belief was failing. This was a big task and I didn’t know how big until it started, but every journey is worthwhile if you embrace it, thanks again.

Susanne Moore
The Centre for Gender Economics and Innovation, Australia