Acknowledgment

Without the 29 contributors this book would have not come to fruition. Their competent, knowledgeable and skillful writing and individual inputs about the wide impacts of meat consumption on health and environmental sustainability are invaluable. Our thanks also go to Phil Webster, a researcher at Curtin University Sustainability Policy (CUSP) Institute, whose many hours of editing and professional eye for detail were of enormous help.

We also acknowledge the patience and support of our loved ones who often missed our company while we were writing, organising and editing the book. Many thanks to Ariel, Mira, Ana, Daniel, Alexander, Roger, Erez and John for being the inspiration behind our efforts.
