Acknowledgment

We would like to express our gratitude to Rachel Ginder, Book Development Editor of IGI Global, for her assistance throughout the production and publication process. Thank you for your help and support, understanding and patience, recommendations and assistance. Also, we would like to thank the members of the Editorial Staff for guidance and constant encouragement throughout the course of this project, even with your busy schedules.

The Handbook is a contribution of authors and reviewers from around the world: USA and Australia, European, Asian, African, and Middle Eastern countries. Professors from different universities came together to identify challenges and propose solutions related to globalization, frontier research in pedagogy, sustainable development, aesthetic and arts education, digital pedagogy, cognitive and constructivism theories, technology, networking and more. Among the 42 chapters there are some 70 authors that collaborated to produce this successful project. Their work enables all of us, writers and future readers, to better understand the conceptual framing and practical applications of learning theory and design in modern education. Thank you for your assistance. We could not have done this project without you.

We are also obliged to the reviewers of Handbook of Applied Learning Theory and Design, for their valuable support, suggestions and efforts to make this project a real success. We are grateful for your cooperation particularly during the evaluation and assessment stage of this ambitious global project. Finally, we recognize that this almighty project would not have been possible without the assistance of our families and friends. Thus, we acknowledge all people whose encouragement and best wishes allowed for the culmination of this project.

The Editors,

Elena Railean
European University of Moldova, Moldova

Gabriela Walker
University of South Dakota, USA

Atilla Elçi
Aksaray University, Turkey

Liz Jackson
University of Hong Kong, Hong Kong