Acknowledgment

Editing a book takes time, knowledge and method.

It takes time to perform a set of different activities from the creation of the idea for the book to the final revision of all the materials involved. In the meantime, other things come to mind: to contact the authors and the reviewers, to organize and integrate the contents, to discuss ideas and experiences, among others. It is the rigorous combination of knowledge and method. All of those accomplishments required insider knowledge in order to carry out the operations in a timely and accurate manner. So, this task of editing a book could not have happened without the help of quite a few persons and our acknowledgments include recognition of everyone who backed the success of this book. Without their support, this book would not have become a reality.

Previously and as editors, we would like to make a point of acknowledging our gratitude to the IGI-Global group. It is undoubtable that without their belief, encouragement, strategic decision-making support in real-time, technical assistance and knowledge of the subject matter, this mission would not have been possible. Thank you!

First, the editors would like to thank each one of the authors for his involvement. Our sincere gratitude goes to the chapter’s authors who contributed with their time, expertise and work. Thank you!

Second, the editors wish to recognize the valuable contributions of the reviewers and advisory board regarding the improvement of quality, coherence, and content presentation of chapters. As most of the authors also served as referees for chapters written by other authors, we highly appreciate their double task. Thank you!

We also wish to personally thank to Farid Mokhtar Noriega not only for providing the contact with Marc Prensky but also for sharing and discussing his ideas with us. We met Farid at an international conference and his expertise on the framework for building third millennium learning environments has captured our attention from the very start. Thank you!

And last but not in the least, we are grateful to Marc Prensky who made himself totally available to writing the foreword of this book. Undoubtedly, it should be realized that this magnanimous gesture lends a giant credibility to the book. As the creator of the Digital Natives idea and mainly of a cultural change, he is cited in many of the chapters of this book, which by itself highlights his commitment with the education arena. Thank you!

To each, thank you!
