Acknowledgment

This has been a year-long project and it is difficult to properly recall and identify all the people who have in some way contributed to its realization; patient family, inspiring friends, and generous work colleagues. I must first acknowledge Darla Deardorff for agreeing to write the Foreword for this handbook upon a chance meeting at the (jointly organized) 25th ISANA International Education Association and 19th Australia and New Zealand Student Services Association (ANZSSA) conferences in Adelaide, Australia in 2014. My most heartfelt gratitude is extended to the 66 authors whose research projects and activities are profiled in this volume. These people are leaders in the field of international education, and I am grateful to be able to share their vision and innovative thinking with educators around the world. Without their willingness to impart their insights, this volume would not have been possible. Special mention to David Starr-Glass who helped me in more ways than I had anticipated. I am also indebted to the reviewers whose willingness to lend a critical eye to each chapter enhanced the quality, coherence, and content presentation of this publication. Authors served as reviewers and other scholars included: Christopher Hill, University of Nottingham Malaysia Campus; Guy Perring, International Graduate Insight Group; Jessica Scott, The University of Adelaide; Kylie Tonellato, Australian Scholarships Group; Luis J Frenzel, Universidad Nacional Autónoma de Nicaragua; Mardi Szantyr, Eynesbury Institute of Business and Technology; and Paul Breen, The University of Westminster. Finally, publishing a book (and this is my first) is a labor of love—an act of endurance and persistence. May readers be inspired to go beyond their own comfortable borders into a world of infinite opportunity.

Twenty years from now you will be more disappointed by the things you didn’t do than by the ones you did do. So throw off the bowlines, sail away from the safe harbor. Catch the trade winds in your sails. Explore. Dream. Discover. – Mark Twain

Donna M. Velliaris
Eynesbury Institute of Business and Technology, Australia