The goal of the Handbook of Research on Foreign Language Education in the Digital Age is to bring world language scholars together to share ideas about innovative ways to meet life-long language learning challenges in the digital age. Numerous individuals have supported us in this endeavor, including our reviewers, chapter authors, administrators, association leaders, copy-editor, colleagues, friends and families, to make this book come to life. This book commemorates the field’s many efforts to improve world learners’ intercultural communication and to make our world a more peaceful and inclusive place.

Our heartfelt appreciation for their support of this project is to Julie Husband, Chair of Languages and Literatures and Associate Professor of English, University of Northern Iowa, and Kim Norman, Chair of the Department of Elementary and Bilingual Education and Full Professor of Curriculum and Instruction, California State University, Fullerton.

We would especially thank the NCOLCTL president Jacques du Plessis and its previous president Michael E. Everson, as well as the CLTA-USA president Helen Shen, for their encouragement and invaluable feedback.

Deep gratitude goes out to the editorial board members and reviewers who voluntarily gave their time, expertise, and insights, which ensured the quality of this research book. Their detailed feedback helped each of the authors improve their research. Great appreciation is similarly extended to our numerous colleagues and friends for their support in providing in-depth review and feedback, which improved and refined our project: Joyce Chen, John Ivers, Jim O’Loughlin, Gabriela Olivares-Cuhat, Jennifer Cooley, John Durham Peters, Timothy Church, Marcia Katigbak Church, Sheila Benson, and Tom Zirker.

Copy editor Jacob Bender, PhD Candidate in English, University of Iowa, could be depended on day or night, and even on weekends. We are immensely grateful for his diligent and concerted effort to proofread each chapter, provide feedback, review translated chapters multiple times, and copy edit word-by-word. His English expertise keeps the language of this book professional.

Finally, we would like to thank all professors, scholars, and doctoral students across 19 countries who submitted proposals and/or contributed to our chapters on 14 languages from around the globe. We appreciate the precious time doctoral advisors spent in supporting our future researchers who submitted and/or contributed to this volume. We are honored to learn about your research on language learning, especially research on endangered languages. In our opinion, all research has a potential and each study is valuable. We will always stand by your side and support you in a multilingual global community.
