Acknowledgment

This Book represents the common interests and research endeavors of the editorial members. Each one of us recognizes the importance of propelling research through constant and active dialog involving a plethora of colleagues and students. The book provided an excellent opportunity for further expanding and sharing ideas with the wider research and professional community for the impact of music information on musical creativity.

We would like to thank all those who contributed to the Book as well as those who participated over the last few years in developing this multidisciplinary area of research and shared with us their thoughts and inspiration.

We would like to acknowledge the significant contribution of peer reviewers for making suggestions and providing their discipline-related experience and merit. It was a great honor for us to work with them over the last few months.

We would finally like to express our gratitude for the encouragement of the two exceptional scholars, Prof. J. Papadatos, Vice Rector - Ionian University and Prof. G. Walton, Northumbria University, who kindly Forworded this Book.
