Acknowledgment

I would like to extend my special thanks to each and every authors and reviewers without whom this book would not have come to a fruitful completion. These academics and professionals have made this project possible by writing and reviewing chapters in their specialist areas, respectively. They have all contributed their knowledge and experience as subject matter experts. Thanks to them, we know new trends and concepts in human resource field which is changing and this brings with it new challenges. All this involves new evidences and tracks to help organizations to survive on their own human resources in a more complex and competitive environment.

To Eleana Wehr (Assistant Development Editor) and Jan Travers (Director of Intellectual Property and Contracts) at IGI Global without whom this book would not have been possible.

And last, but certainly no least, to Sergio for their enduring support and encouragement.
