Acknowledgment

This book is the result of a voluntary co-operation in between many authors from both the South and the North. Without listing their names, we – the 2 co-editors for this book – express our gratitude to all of the authors for their contributions and for bearing with us as this book has put them not only before challenges with the contents of their chapter but also with quite some formal requirements, which are unavoidably part of the quality control process and administration of an international publication.

As it was kind of a ‘trigger’ (or final push) we specifically want to refer to the organizers and leaders of the International Workshop on E-Discovery in Antwerp, December 2014, who subsequently also were prepared to write for this book: Marc Goovaerts, Paul Nieuwenhuysen, Piet De Keyser and the whole team supported by VLIR/UOS (the Flemish Interuniversity Council’s international development co-operation wing).

Special words of thanks also are due for the team of IGI, who were always quick and helpful in responding our questions or giving guidance in the book production process.

And last but not least: thanks to you, the readers, for showing interest in this topic and book. We, as editors, hope to get more feedback from you, the readers.
