Table of Contents

Preface .................................................................................................................................................... xiii

Chapter 1
Defence Acquisition: A Practice in Need of Better Theorizing ................................................................. 1
   Kevin Burgess, Cranfield University, UK

Chapter 2
Competition in Defence Practice: Theory and Reality .................................................................................. 22
   Trevor Taylor, Cranfield University, UK

Chapter 3
Defence Acquisition Reform and the British Condition Promises, Betrayal, and Resignation ................. 39
   John Louth, Royal United Services Institute, UK

Chapter 4
Sectoral Polyarchy: How the Inherent Complexity and Risk of Defence Sector Acquisition Devours Innovation and Choice ........................................................................................................... 57
   Dan Bishop, Ministry of Defence, UK

Chapter 5
Acquisition and Its Theoretical Foundations: A Phenomenon at the Crossroads of Phenomena .......... 77
   Sophie Lefeez, University of Paris (Sorbonne), France

Chapter 6
Building a Conceptual Framework for Defense Acquisition Management Based on Service
   Dominant Logic Theory .......................................................................................................................... 93
   Andreas H. Glas, Bundeswehr University Munich, Germany
   Michael Essig, Bundeswehr University Munich, Germany

Chapter 7
Collaborative Defence Procurement: How to Make It Work ..................................................................... 109
   Baudouin Heuninckx, University of Nottingham, UK
Chapter 8
Critical Raw Materials and UK Defence Acquisition: The Case of Rare Earth Elements .................. 129
   Julieanna Powell-Turner, Cranfield University, UK
   Peter D. Antill, Cranfield University, UK

Chapter 9
Defence Acquisition: A New Beast or a Dinosaur?................................................................. 150
   Derrick J Neal, Cranfield University, UK

Chapter 10
Defence Procurement, Innovation, and Value for Money ...................................................... 167
   Robert Charles Wylie, University of New South Wales, Canberra

Chapter 11
Defense Acquisition, Public Administration, and Pragmatism.............................................. 186
   Keith F. Snider, Naval Postgraduate School, USA

Chapter 12
Innovation, Technology, and Defence Procurement: Reform or Paradigmatic Shift? ............. 205
   Renaud Bellais, ENSTA Bretagne, France
   Josselin Droff, ENSTA Bretagne, France

Chapter 13
Institutional Entrepreneurship in Defence Acquisition: What Don’t We Understand? ............ 222
   Derek McAvoy, Cranfield University, UK

Chapter 14
Professionalism in Defence Acquisition: The Importance of Knowledge and the Concept of the Intelligent Customer.................................................................................................................. 242
   David M Moore, Cranfield University, UK

Chapter 15
The Rationale for Offsets in Defence Acquisition from a Theoretical Perspective ................. 263
   Kogila Balakrishnan, University of Warwick, UK

Chapter 16
Thinking Makes It So: The Foundations of a Theory of Business Ethics in Acquisition .......... 277
   Paul Newall, Royal Navy, UK

Compilation of References ....................................................................................................... 301

About the Contributors ............................................................................................................. 344

Index .......................................................................................................................................... 349