Acknowledgment

This book was inspired first and foremost by our students. The need to guide instructors in the development of students’ intercultural communication competence in higher education was eminent, and because of this inspiration we are grateful.

We specially want to acknowledge all those who responded to the first call for proposals. Their overwhelming response was an enormous source of encouragement that the book was going to be a success.

Our deepest debt of gratitude goes to all authors. Without their contributions, hard work, and diligence in meeting deadlines, this book would not have been possible.

The book benefited enormously from the feedback given by the reviewers to the authors. Their suggestions and critiques were really valuable, and for this we are particularly thankful.

The support we received from both our institutions, the University of British Columbia, Okanagan Campus and Kwantlen Polytechnic University, was invaluable. A course release, a sabbatical, and accommodations in general made it possible for us to achieve our goal in a timely manner.

We want to thank our families for their patience and understanding. Days of endless work were devoted to the development of this book and this was time we took away from them.

Finally, we are both thankful to IGI Global for the incomparable learning experience this project has been. It was a delight to work in such a harmonious environment.
