Acknowledgment

The editors thank contributing authors as well as editorial board members. Additional gratitude is extended to those authors whose first language was not English. You and your translators’ contributions to the book are greatly appreciated. Your involvement was absolutely necessary in conveying the universality of teaching and learning and the specificity of your unique perspectives.

This work crossed several borders and all of our authors held in mind the universality of teaching and learning. In that regard we acknowledge the children and students who are the focus of our efforts contained herein. It is hard to comprehend that our school age children are “at -risk” yet it is a matter of fact that many children are. This book is dedicated to you and those teachers and others who dedicate themselves to your success - you are not alone.

Editor RKG acknowledges his wife Patricia for her patience throughout the process. Additional gratitude is extended to Teddie, Sterling and Phillipa Ashby for their inestimable strength and never ending support.
