_Guru Brahma Gurur Vishnu, Guru Devo Maheshwaraha_
_Guru Saakshat Para Brahma, Tasmai Sree Gurave Namaha_

Meaning: Guru (the teacher) is verily the representative of Brahma (the creator), Vishnu (the sustainer) and Shiva (the destroyer). He creates, sustains knowledge, and destroys the weeds of ignorance. I salute such a Guru.

The ideas presented in this book have been developed as a result of advice and assistance offered by a number of people. It is by the grace of God and the will of the Almighty that I take this opportunity to convey my regards and thanks to those who have helped me and supported me at different stages in the completion of the book.

The first draft of this manuscript was written whilst I was a PhD student in the department of information systems and computing (DISC) at Brunel University. I would like to thank a number of academic staff at DISC, particularly Dr. Jyoti Choudrie, Professor Guy Fitzgerald, Professor Ray Paul, and Dr. Willem-Paul Brinkman for their positive criticism and suggestions during the different stages of the research presented in this book. Furthermore, I wholeheartedly acknowledge the continuous inspiration and encouragement rendered to me by my friends and colleagues at DISC.
The participants in this research set aside time in order to complete the questionnaire and to provide insightful comments; I am highly grateful to them all for their invaluable assistance.

This book would not have been possible without the cooperation and assistance of the staff at IGI Global. I would like to thank my associates at IGI Global, namely Michelle Potter for handling the book proposal, Jan Travers for managing the contract, Meg Stocking, and Lynley Lapp for managing this project and especially for answering queries and helping to keep this project on schedule. A special word of thanks also goes to Ms. Kristin Roth and the anonymous reviewers for their useful and constructive comments that have been incorporated into the final version of this book.

Last, but not least, I bestow my unbounded gratitude and deepest sense of respect to my family whose blessings, concerted efforts, constant encouragement, and wholehearted co-operation enabled me to reach this milestone.
