Creating Business Value with Information Technology: Challenges and Solutions

Table of Contents

Preface ......................................................................................................................... i

Chapter I. Investigating the Relationship between Strategic Alignment and Information Technology Business Value: The Discovery of a Paradox ......................................................................................................................... 1
   Paul P. Tallon, Boston College, USA
   Kenneth L. Kraemer, University of California, Irvine, USA

Chapter II. Information-Induced Strategic Alignment: Toward a Semiological Analysis ......................................................................................................................... 23
   Ra’ed M. Shams, University of Bahrain, Bahrain
   Fredrick P. Wheeler, University of Bradford, UK

Chapter III. Inventory Productivity Impacts of IT-Enabled Supply Chain Coordination in Manufacturing Environments ......................................................... 50
   Kristina Setzekorn, Oakland University, USA
   Arun Rai, Georgia State University, USA
   Arlyn J. Melcher, Southern Illinois University at Carbondale, USA

Chapter IV. Information Technology Spending Association with Organizational Productivity and Performance: A Study of the Mexican Banking Industry, 1982–1992 ................................................................. 89
   Carlos J. Navarrete, California State Polytechnic University, USA
   James B. Pick, University of Redlands, USA
Chapter V. An Empirical Analysis of Productivity Gains from Information Technology’s Reduction of Coordination Costs .......... 125
   Namchul Shin, Pace University, USA

Chapter VI. Information Technology Spending and the Value of the Firm: The Case of Mexican Banks .................................................. 146
   Carlos J. Navarrete, California State Polytechnic University, USA
   James B. Pick, University of Redlands, USA

Chapter VII. Creating Business Value through E-Commerce .... 166
   Jatinder N. D. Gupta, University of Alabama in Huntsville, USA
   Sushil K. Sharma, Ball State University, USA

   Bernd C. Stahl, University College Dublin, Ireland

Chapter IX. Establishing the Business Value of Network Security Using Analytical Hierarchical Process ........................................ 203
   Susan J. Chinburg, Oklahoma State University, USA
   Ramesh Sharda, Oklahoma State University, USA
   Mark Weiser, Oklahoma State University, USA

Chapter X. Increasing Business Value of Communications Infrastructure: The Case of Internet-based Virtual Private Networks ................................................................. 220
   Bongsik Shin, San Diego State University, USA
   Daniel C. Kinsella, Jr., Deloitte & Touch LLP, USA

Chapter XI. An Optimization Model for Telecommunication Systems .......................................................................................... 236
   Bahador Ghahramani, University of Nebraska at Omaha, USA

Chapter XII. Web Initiatives and E-Commerce Strategy: How Do Canadian Manufacturing SMEs Compare? ........................... 261
   Ron Craig, Wilfrid Laurier University, Canada
Chapter XIII. Management's Contribution to Internet Commerce Benefit—Experiences of Online Small Businesses ...... 277
   Simpson Poon, Charles Sturt University, Australia & University of Hong Kong, HK

Chapter XIV. Electronic Commerce Opportunities, Challenges and Organizational Issues for Australian SMEs ......................... 297
   Mohini Singh, RMIT University, Australia

About the Authors .............................................................................. 315

Index ................................................................................................ 322