Creating Knowledge-Based Healthcare
Organizations

Table of Contents

Foreword ........................................................................................................................................ vii

Elie Geisler, Illinois Institute of Technology, USA

Preface ................................................................................................................................ .......... ix

Nilmini Wickramasinghe, Cleveland State University, USA
Jatinder N.D. Gupta, University of Alabama in Huntsville, USA
Sushil K. Sharma, Ball State University, USA

SECTION I: KNOWLEDGE MANAGEMENT IN THE HEALTHCARE INDUSTRY

Chapter I. Knowledge Management in Healthcare ................................................................. 1

Sushil K. Sharma, Ball State University, USA
Nilmini Wickramasinghe, Cleveland State University, USA
Jatinder N.D. Gupta, University of Alabama in Huntsville, USA

Chapter II. Knowledge Management in Hospitals ................................................................. 14

Kevin C. Desouza, University of Illinois at Chicago, USA

Chapter III. How to Handle Knowledge Management in Healthcare: A Description of a Model to Deal with the Current and Ideal Situation ......................................................... 29

A.E. Wahle, Cap Gemini Ernst & Young B.V., The Netherlands
W.A. Groothuis, Cap Gemini Ernst & Young B.V., The Netherlands

Chapter IV. How to Start or Improve a KM System in a Hospital or Healthcare
Organization ................................................................................................................................. 44

A. H. Rubenstein, IASTA Inc., USA
E. Geisler, Illinois Institute of Technology, USA
SECTION II: APPROACHES, FRAMEWORKS AND TOOLS TO CREATE KNOWLEDGE-BASED HEALTHCARE ORGANIZATIONS

Chapter V. Moving Toward an e-Hospital ................................................................. 50
  Vidyaranya B. Gargeya, The University of North Carolina at Greensboro, USA
  Deborah I. Sorrell, High Point Regional Health System, USA

Chapter VI. Applying Automatic Data Collection Tools for Real-Time Patient Management ................................................................................................................ 65
  Richard J. Puerzer, Hofstra University, USA

Chapter VII. Data Mining and Knowledge Discovery in Healthcare Organizations: A Decision-Tree Approach ........................................................................... 78
  Murat Caner Testik, Cukurova University, Turkey
  George C. Runger, Arizona State University, USA
  Bradford Kirkman-Liff, Arizona State University, USA
  Edward A. Smith, University of Arizona and Translational Genomics Research Institute, USA

Chapter VIII. Engineering Dependable Health Information Systems .................. 91
  Khin Than Win, University of Wollongong, Australia
  Peter Croll, Queensland University of Technology, Australia

Chapter IX. e-Health with Knowledge Management: The Areas of Tomorrow ...... 110
  Sushil K. Sharma, Ball State University, USA
  Nilmini Wickramasinghe, Cleveland State University, USA

Chapter X. Evidence-Based Medicine: A New Approach in the Practice of Medicine ................................................................. 125
  Nilmini Wickramasinghe, Cleveland State University, USA
  Sushil K. Sharma, Ball State University, USA
  Harsha P. Reddy, Cleveland State University, USA

Chapter XI. Moving to an Online Framework for Knowledge-Driven Healthcare .. 136
  Bruce Shadbolt, Canberra Clinical School, Australia
  Rui Wang, National Health Sciences Centre, Australia
  Paul S. Craft, Canberra Hospital, Australia

Chapter XII. Using the Malcolm Baldrige National Quality Award Criteria to Enable KM and Create a Systemic Organizational Perspective ......................... 150
  Susan West Engelkemeyer, Babson College, USA
  Sharon Muret-Wagstaff, Children’s Hospital Boston, USA

Chapter XIII. Realizing Knowledge Assets in the Medical Sciences with Data Mining: An Overview ................................................................. 164
  Adam Fadlalla, Cleveland State University, USA
  Nilmini Wickramasinghe, Cleveland State University, USA
SECTION III: KEY ISSUES AND CONCERNS OF VARIOUS KNOWLEDGE MANAGEMENT IMPLEMENTATIONS: EVIDENCE FROM PRACTICE

Chapter XIV. Organizational Control Mode, Cognitive Activity & Performance
Reliability: The Case of a National Hospital in Japan .............................................. 179
M. Saito, Waseda University, Japan
T. Inoue, Waseda University, Japan
H. Seki, Ryutsu Keizai University, Japan

Chapter XV. Tele-Medicine: Building Knowledge-Based Tele-Health Capability in New Zealand ................................................................. 193
Nabeel A. Y. Al-Qirim, Auckland University of Technology, New Zealand

Chapter XVI. Aligning Multiple Knowledge Perspectives in a Health Services System: A Case Study ................................................................. 207
Tanya Castleman, Deakin University, Australia
Paul Swatman, University of South Australia, Australia
Danielle Fowler, University of Baltimore, USA

Chapter XVII. Knowing How Intranets Enable Knowledge Work: An Exploratory Study in Public Health ...................................................... 222
Martin Hughes, National University of Ireland, Galway, Ireland
William Golden, National University of Ireland, Galway, Ireland

Chapter XVIII. Knowledge Management in Indian Companies: Benchmarking the Pharmaceutical Industry .................................................. 235
John Gammack, Griffith University, Australia
Pranay Desai, Griffith University, Australia
Kuldeep Sandhu, Griffith University, Australia
Heidi Winklhofer, Griffith University, Australia

Chapter XIX. “Do No Harm”: Can Healthcare Live Up to It? ...................... 254
Nat Natarajan, Tennessee Technological University, USA
Amanda H. Hoffmeister, Cookeville Regional Medical Center, USA

SECTION IV: MANAGING KNOWLEDGE AS AN ASSET IN HEALTHCARE ORGANIZATIONS

Chapter XX. Temporary Communication Infrastructures for Dynamic KM in the Complex and Innovative Environment of Palliative Care ........................................... 270
Graydon Davison, University of Western Sydney, Australia

Chapter XXI. Managing Healthcare Organizations through the Knowledge Productivity Measurement ...................................................... 286
Jae-Hyeon Ahn, KAIST, Korea
Suk-Gwon Chang, Hanyang University, Korea