Table of Contents

Foreword ......................................................................................................................... xvii
Preface .......................................................................................................................... xix
Acknowledgment .......................................................................................................... xxix

Chapter I
Re-Assessing Validity and Reliability in the E-Learning Environment .......................... 1
  Selby Markham, Monash University, Australia
  John Hurt, Monash University, Australia

Chapter II
Assessing Teaching and Students’ Meaningful Learning Processes in an E-Learning Course .... 20
  Päivi Hakkarainen, University of Lapland, Finland
  Tarja Saarelainen, University of Lapland, Finland
  Heli Ruokamo, University of Lapland, Finland

Chapter III
Collaborative E-Learning Using Wikis: A Case Report .............................................. 37
  Charlotte Brack, Monash University, Australia

Chapter IV
Learning and Assessment with Virtual Worlds .......................................................... 55
  Mike Hobbs, Anglia Ruskin University, UK
  Elaine Brown, Anglia Ruskin University, UK
  Marie Gordon, Anglia Ruskin University, UK

Chapter V
A Faculty Approach to Implementing Advanced, E-Learning Dependent, Formative and
Summative Assessment Practices ............................................................................ 76
  Paul White, Monash University, Australia
  Greg Duncan, Monash University, Australia
Chapter VI
Ensuring Security and Integrity of Data for Online Assessment ................................................................. 97
Christine Armatas, Victoria University, Australia
Bernard Colbert, Telstra Corporation Ltd., Australia

Chapter VII
Issues in Peer Assessment and E-Learning .................................................................................................... 117
Robyn Benson, Monash University, Australia

Chapter VIII
The Validity of Group Marks as a Proxy for Individual Learning in E-Learning Settings ....................... 136
Paul Lajbcygier, Monash University, Australia
Christine Spratt, Royal Australian and New Zealand College of Psychiatrists, Australia

Chapter IX
Validation of E-Learning Courses in Computer Science and Humanities: A Matter of Context .......... 151
Robert S. Friedman, New Jersey Institute of Technology, USA
Fadi P. Deek, New Jersey Institute of Technology, USA
Norbert Elliot, New Jersey Institute of Technology, USA

Chapter X
Designing, Implementing and Evaluating a Self-and-Peer Assessment Tool for E-Learning Environments .................................................................................................................. 170
Richard Tucker, Deakin University, Australia
Jan Fermelis, Deakin University, Australia
Stuart Palmer, Deakin University, Australia

Chapter XI
Identifying Latent Classes and Differential Item Functioning in a Cohort of E-Learning Students .......................................................... 195
Andrew Sanford, Monash University, Australia
Paul Lajbcygier, Monash University, Australia
Christine Spratt, Royal Australian and New Zealand College of Psychiatrists, Australia

Chapter XII
Is Learning as Effective When Studying Using a Mobile Device Compared to Other Methods? .... 218
Christine Armatas, Victoria University, Australia
Anthony Saliba, Charles Sturt University, Australia

Chapter XIII
Evaluation Strategies for Open and Distributed Learning Environments ................................................. 234
Thomas C. Reeves, University of Georgia, USA
John G. Hedberg, Macquarie University, Australia
Chapter XIV
Introducing Integrated E-Portfolio Across Courses in a Postgraduate Program in Distance and Online Education ......................................................................................................................................................................................... 243

Madhumita Bhattacharya, Massey University, New Zealand

Chapter XV
Practical Strategies for Assessing the Quality of Collaborative Learner Engagement........................................ 254

John LeBaron, Western Carolina University, USA
Carol Bennett, WRESA Elementary & Middle Grades Curriculum Coordinator, USA

Chapter XVI
Afterword: Learning-Centred Focus to Assessment Practices................................................................. 270

Compilation of References ............................................................................................................ 272

About the Contributors .................................................................................................................... 301

Index................................................................................................................................................... 307