Our thanks are due to the group of world wide collaborators in this project, and to the students of the Bioingenium research group, at the National University of Colombia, within which the work of the last three years has set the idea of this book. We also want to thank the PhD student Andrea Rueda who have read drafts, has tried to detect and correct as many typos as possible, and has helped us with the laborious task of organizing the full book manuscript. We are afraid that despite all her efforts, some of these mistakes will have survived; we will be grateful to any readers kind enough to point them out.
