Table of Contents

Foreword ............................................................................................................................................. xx

Preface ...............................................................................................................................................xxii

Acknowledgment.............................................................................................................................xxvii

Section 1
Theoretical Considerations

Chapter 1
Games and Simulations in Training: Factors to Consider When Designing for Adult Learners ................................................................................................................................. 1

Courtney Uram, James Madison University, USA
Diane Wilcox, James Madison University, USA
Jane Thall, James Madison University, USA

Chapter 2
Explaining the Educational Power of Games ....................................................................................... 17

Timo Lainema, Turku School of Economics, Finland
Eeli Saarinen, Turku School of Economics, Finland

Chapter 3
Educational Simulations: Learning from the Past and Ensuring
Success in the Future ....................................................................................................................... 32

David A. Guralnick, Kaleidoscope Learning, USA
Christine Levy, Kaleidoscope Learning, USA

Chapter 4
Models of Politics and Society in Video Games............................................................................... 47

Tobias Bevc, Goethe-Universität Frankfurt am Main, Germany

Chapter 5
A Proposed Framework for Studying Educational Virtual Worlds.................................................. 65

Ricardo Javier Rademacher Mena, Futur-E-Scape, LLC, USA
Chapter 6
The Dynamics of Video Gaming: Influences Affecting Game Play and Learning................................. 78
  Sandra Schamroth Abrams, St. John’s University, USA

Section 2
Applying Theory to Game Design

Chapter 7
Exploratory Digital Games for Advanced Skills: Theory and Application ........................................ 92
  Juan Carlos Sanchez-Lozano, Concordia University, Canada

Chapter 8
Designing Educational Games: A Pedagogical Approach ................................................................. 108
  Stephen Tang, Liverpool John Moores University, UK
  Martin Hanneghan, Liverpool John Moores University, UK

Chapter 9
Moving to the Next Level: Designing Embedded Assessments into Educational Games ...................... 126
  Jody S. Underwood, Pragmatic Solutions, Inc., USA
  Stacy Kruse, Pragmatic Solutions, Inc., USA
  Peter Jakl, Pragmatic Solutions, Inc., USA

Chapter 10
The Design of a Health Literacy Game: Face the Case .................................................................... 141
  Jennifer McCabe, James Madison University, USA

Chapter 11
The Application of ‘Activity Theory’ in the Design of Educational Simulation Games .......................... 154
  Paul Peachey, University of Glamorgan, UK

Chapter 12
The Learning Toolkit: The Design, Development, Testing and Dissemination of Evidence-Based Educational Software ............................................................................................................. 168
  Philip C. Abrami, Concordia University, Canada
  Robert S. Savage, McGill University, Canada
  Gia Deleveaux, Concordia University, Canada
  Anne Wade, Concordia University, Canada
  Elizabeth Meyer, Concordia University, Canada
  Catherine LeBel, Concordia University, Canada
Section 3
Using Games in Education

Chapter 13
Games and the Development of Students’ Civic Engagement and Ecological Stewardship
Janice L. Anderson, University of North Carolina – Chapel Hill, USA

Chapter 14
Quests and Achievements in the Classroom
Matthew Barton, St. Cloud State University, USA
Kevin Moberley, Old Dominion University, USA

Chapter 15
Modifying Popular Board Games to Illustrate Complex Strategic Concepts: A Comparison with a Professional Computer Simulation
Scott Gallagher, James Madison University, USA
David Cavazos, James Madison University, USA
Stephen Harper, James Madison University, USA

Chapter 16
Animated Computer Education Games for Students with ADHD: Evaluating their Development and Effectiveness as Instructional Tools
Kim B. Dielmann, University of Central Arkansas, USA
Julie Meaux, University of Central Arkansas, USA

Chapter 17
Adult Learning and Virtual Worlds Simulations
Michele D. Estes, James Madison University, USA
Randell Snow, James Madison University, USA

Chapter 18
Using Commercial-Off-the-Shelf Video Games to Facilitate Habits of Mind: Spore™ in the Seventh Grade Life Science Classroom
Michael A. Evans, Virginia Tech, USA

Chapter 19
“Click, You’re It!” The Role of Games in the K-12 Educational Setting
Karen Kellison, James Madison University, USA
George Font, James Madison University, USA
Chapter 20
Video Games in Education: Opportunities for Learning Beyond Research Claims and Advertising Hype
P.G. Schrader, University of Nevada, USA
Kimberly A. Lawless, University of Illinois, USA
Hasan Deniz, University of Nevada, USA

Chapter 21
Benefits of Video and Eye Toy Gaming for Children with Autism
Nava Silton, Fordham University, USA
Ann Higgins D’Alessandro, Fordham University, USA

Chapter 22
Gaming and Simulation: Training, and the Military
Sheila Seitz, Windwalker Corporation, USA
Courtney Uram, James Madison University, USA

Chapter 23
Design-Researching Gamestar Mechanic: Integrating Sound Learning Theory into a Game about Game Design
Ivan Alex Games, Michigan State University, USA

Chapter 24
Second Life as a Tool for Engaging Students Across the Curriculum
Kathryn E. Stevens, James Madison University, USA
S.E. Kruck, James Madison University, USA
Jeremy Hawkins, James Madison University, USA
Suzanne C. Baker, James Madison University, USA

Chapter 25
Collaborative Online Roleplay for Adult Learners
Paul Pivec, Deakin University, Australia
Maja Pivec, University of Applied Sciences, Austria

Chapter 26
ExerLearning®: Movement, Fitness, Technology and Learning
Judy Shasek, ExerLearning
Chapter 27
Designing Serious Games for People with Dual Diagnosis: Learning Disabilities and Sensory Impairments .......................................................... 424

David J. Brown, Nottingham Trent University, Clifton Campus, UK
Penny Standen, University of Nottingham, UK
Lindsay Evett, Nottingham Trent University, Clifton Campus, UK
Steven Battersby, Nottingham Trent University, Clifton Campus, UK
Nick Shopland, Nottingham Trent University, Clifton Campus, UK

Compilation of References ........................................................................................................... 440

About the Contributors .................................................................................................................. 496

Index ........................................................................................................................................... 507