Acknowledgment

Editing a book is a cumbersome, effortful and time consuming process that spans from the initial concept and its transformation to a book proposal to the final delivery of the manuscript and the related with the chapters paperwork. Having these qualities, book editing can never become a “one man show”, on the contrary team work and collaboration with a large number of individuals is the most critical issue in a book project.

Therefore, I would like to acknowledge the support of all the people participated in the preparation of this book, starting from the IGI Global personnel whose contribution throughout the project lifecycle has been invaluable. Special thanks goes to Ms. Christine Bufton my editorial assistant who was always there on time when I needed guidance or feedback from the publisher.

I would like to thank the body of reviewers for their constructive and fruitful comments that supported the authors of the accepted chapters, and as I would like to think, those of chapters rejected as well. Special thanks go to the chapter authors that also served as reviewers of contributions by other authors. They all accepted the extra work with pleasure and I thank them for that.

I also want to thank the members of the Executive Advisory Board for their willingness to participate in this project proving their faith in this book, for their constructive comments during the reviewing process and for their feedback regarding the final structure of this book.

Finally, I would like to thank all contributing authors for trusting me with their work; it means a lot to me. Last but not least, I wholeheartedly thank all the people close to me that I ‘tortured’ for over one year but they still kept providing me with their patience and support, whenever I needed it.
