Table of Contents

Foreword ............................................................................................................................................. xxxii

Preface ............................................................................................................................................. xxxv

Acknowledgment ................................................................................................................................ xlv

Volume I

Section 1

Discursive Behavior and Social Interaction

Chapter 1
Discursive Practices and Creation of Identity Using the Mobile Phone................................. 1
Clare Lloyd, The University of Newcastle, Australia
Patricia Gillard, The University of Newcastle, Australia

Chapter 2
Status and Email Construction in Three Hong Kong Workplaces........................................ 18
Charley Rowe, University of Hong Kong, China

Chapter 3
“Pathfinding” Discourses of Self in Social Network Sites .................................................... 39
Mariza Georgalou, Lancaster University, UK

Chapter 4
Social Interaction Process Analysis of Bengalis’ on Orkut® .................................................. 66
Anupam Das, Indiana University, USA

Chapter 5
Membership and Activity in an Online Parenting Community .............................................. 88
Sarah Pedersen, Robert Gordon University, UK
Janet Smithson, University of Exeter, UK
Chapter 6
The Sociolinguistics of SMS Ways to Identify Gender Boundaries ................................................... 104
Muhammad Shaban Rafi, University of Management and Technology, Pakistan

Chapter 7
Discursive Practice and the Nigerian Identity in Personal Emails ..................................................... 112
Innocent Chiluwa, Covenant University, Nigeria

Chapter 8
Constructing a Diaspora Anglophone Cameroonian Identity Online ................................................. 130
Eric A. Anchimbe, University of Bayreuth, Germany

Chapter 9
Multimodal Communication and Meta-Modal Discourse ................................................................. 145
Kristy Beers Fägersten, Dalarna University, Sweden
Elin Holmsten, Dalarna University, Sweden
Una Cunningham, Dalarna University, Sweden

Chapter 10
‘Masculine Normal Guy Here’: Lonely Hearts and ‘Normal’ Gays in Cyberspace ............................... 164
Martin Paviour-Smith, Massey University, New Zealand

Chapter 11
The Dynamics of Language Mixing in Nigerian Digital Communication ........................................... 180
Rotimi Taiwo, University of Freiburg, Germany & Obafemi Awolowo University, Nigeria

Chapter 12
Intertextuality and Constructing Islamic Identities Online ............................................................... 191
Najma Al Zidjaly, Sultan Qaboos University, Oman

Chapter 13
Gender-Consciousness in Computer-Mediated Discourse in Nigeria ............................................... 205
Tunde Onadeko, Olabisi Onabanjo University, Nigeria

Chapter 14
Communication in Construction Design Teams: Moving into the Virtual World .............................. 218
Sue Sherratt, University of Newcastle, Australia
William Sher, University of Newcastle, Australia
Anthony Williams, University of Newcastle, Australia
Rod Gameson, University of Wolverhampton, UK
Section 2
Linguistic Forms and Structure

Chapter 15
Humor and Play in CMC ................................................................. 235
Ilona Vandergriff, San Francisco State University, USA

Chapter 16
SMS Texting Practices and Communicative Intention ........................................ 252
Susana Sotillo, Montclair State University, USA

Chapter 17
Chat Discourse ............................................................................. 266
Cláudia Silva, University of Porto, Portugal

Chapter 18
First Person Pronouns in Online Diary Writing .................................................. 281
John Newman, University of Alberta, Canada
Laura Teddiman, University of Alberta, Canada

Chapter 19
A Digital Forensic Analysis of Advance Fee Fraud (419 Scams) ......................... 296
Christine I. Ofulue, National Open University of Nigeria, Nigeria

Chapter 20
Online Orthographies ...................................................................... 318
Christiana Themistocleous, University of Manchester, UK

Chapter 21
Analyzing the Discourse of E-Mail Communication .......................................... 335
Yasemin Kirkgoz, Çukurova University, Turkey

Chapter 22
Spelling Practices in Text Messaging ..................................................... 349
Akinmade Timothy Akande, Obafemi Awolowo University, Nigeria
Olayiwola Timothy Akinwale, Obafemi Awolowo University, Nigeria

Chapter 23
Hyperjournalism for the Hyperreader ....................................................... 363
Arlette Huguenin Dumittan, University of Zurich, Switzerland

Chapter 24
Thematic Organization and the Analysis of Selected Online Academic Scientific Journals’ Sites ................................................................. 376
Foluke Olayinka Unuabonah, Redeemer’s University, Nigeria
Section 3
Semantics and Pragmatics

Chapter 25
Gender and Politeness in Indian Emails ................................................................. 389
   Asha Kaul, Indian Institute of Management, India
   Vaibhavi Kulkarni, Rutgers University, USA

Chapter 26
Users’ Relevance on the Web.................................................................................. 411
   Francisco Yus, University of Alicante, Spain

Chapter 27
Inferences in Discourse Comprehension of E-Mails ............................................. 424
   Moji Olateju, Obafemi Awolowo University, Nigeria
   Oluwabunmi Adeleke, Obafemi Awolowo University, Nigeria

Chapter 28
The Semantics of Human Interaction in Chinese E-Communication.................. 437
   Adrian Tien, National University of Singapore, Singapore

Chapter 29
Beliefs in GSM Text Messaging Among Academics in two Nigerian Universities ......................................................... 468
   Akin Odebunmi, University of Ibadan, Nigeria
   Moses A. Alo, University of Ibadan, Nigeria

Chapter 30
Functions and Strategies of Email Communication at the Workplace.................. 479
   Hadina Habil, Universiti Teknologi Malaysia, Malaysia

Volume II

Chapter 31
Visualisation of Communication in some Mobile Phone Directory and Call Log Icons......................... 490
   Ibrahim Esan Olaosun, Obafemi Awolowo University, Nigeria

Chapter 32
Like a Poke on Facebook Emergent Semantics in Location-Aware Social Network Services ........... 497
   Anders Kofod-Petersen, Norwegian University of Science & Technology, Norway
   Rebekah Wegener, Macquire University, Australia
Chapter 33
An Analytico-Philosophical Discourse to the Pragmatic Approach to Digital Communication in Nigeria

Oladele Abiodun Balogun, Olabisi Onabanjo University, Nigeria

Chapter 34
Impoliteness as a Model for Virtual Speech Community Building

Tracy R. LeBlanc, Louisiana State University, USA

Chapter 35
The YouTubification of Politics, Impoliteness and Polarization

Pilar Garcés-Conejos Blitvich, University of North Carolina at Charlotte, USA

Chapter 36
Digital Communication in Indigenous Languages

Funmi O. Olúbọ́dẹ́-Sàwè, Federal University of Technology, Nigeria

Section 4
Discursive Behavior in Virtual Learning

Chapter 37
When the Online Conversation is Prompted

Boyd H. Davis, University of North Carolina at Charlotte, USA
Mary K. Smith, University of North Carolina at Charlotte, USA
Shu-Chiao Tsai, University of North Carolina at Charlotte, USA

Chapter 38
A Corpus-Based Approach to Teaching English in Abstracts

Amelia Maria Cava, University of Naples Federico II, Italy

Chapter 39
Traditional and Virtual in Nigerian Oral English Pedagogy

Taiwo Soneye, Obafemi Awolowo University, Nigeria

Chapter 40
From CMC Technologies to Social Participation Technologies

Chaka Chaka, Walter Sisulu University, South Africa

Chapter 41
An Appraisal of a Computer-Based Continuing Professional Development (CPD)
Course for Nigerian English Teachers and Teacher-Trainners

Kehinde A. Ayoola, Obafemi Awolowo University, Nigeria
Chapter 42
Engagement in a Second Life Virtual World with Students ................................................................. 651

Caroline M. L. Ho, Nanyang Technological University, Singapore

Chapter 43
Students’ Evaluation of a MOODLE Resource in the Federal University of Technology, Akure, Nigeria.............................................................................................................................................. 670

Titi Fola-Adebayo, Federal University of Technology, Nigeria

Chapter 44
The Influence of the Cultural and Linguistic Orientations of Sultan Qaboos University (SQU) Students on Their Responses to Literatures on the Internet.................................................................................................................. 687

Rahma Al-Mahrooqi, Sultan Qaboos University, Oman
Victoria Tuzlukova, Sultan Qaboos University, Oman

Chapter 45
Attitudes to Online Reading and Web-Based Instructions in Developing Societies .......................... 700

Olushola B. Are, Kogi State Polytechnic, Nigeria

Chapter 46
Second Language Writing Instruction through Blended Learning: Report on a Pilot Course at the University of Freiburg for Undergraduate Students of English......................................................... 716

Alison Nagel, University of Freiburg, Germany
Kai Woodfin, University of Freiburg, Germany

Section 5
Conceptual and Theoretical Issues

Chapter 47
New Directions in Understanding Cyberbullying ...................................................................................... 729

Artemio Ramirez, Jr., Arizona State University, USA
Kellie E. Palazzolo, Arizona State University, USA
Matthew W. Savane, Arizona State University, USA
Douglas M. Deiss, Arizona State University, USA

Chapter 48
Virtual Research Communities: From International Patterns to Local Implementations .................... 745

Victoria Tuzlukova, Sultan Qaboos University, Oman
Irina Rozina, Institute of Management, Business and Law, Russia
Chapter 49
A Pragmatic Approach to Analysing CMC Discourse ................................................................. 759
Christina Howell-Richardson, King’s College London, UK

Chapter 50
Politeness as a Theoretical and Empirical Framework for Studying Relational
Communication in Computer-Mediated Contexts ................................................................. 776
David A. Morand, The Pennsylvania State University, USA

Chapter 51
New Media and Cultural Identity in the Global Society.............................................................. 795
Guo-Ming Chen, South China University of Technology, China & University of Rhode Island, USA
Kai Zhang, University of Rhode Island, USA

Chapter 52
An Integrated Approach to the Analysis of Mediated Interactions in Cyberplaces:
The Presentation of Self in Blogs ........................................................................................................ 810
Eleonora Brivio, Università Cattolica del Sacro Cuore, Italy
Francesca Cilento Ibarra, Università Cattolica del Sacro Cuore, Italy
Carlo Galimberti, Università Cattolica del Sacro Cuore, Italy

Chapter 53
Relational Works in Synchronous Text-Based CMC of Virtual Teams ........................................ 830
Erika Darics, University of Loughborough, UK

Chapter 54
Tracing the Non-Debatable Topic in Online Discussion .............................................................. 852
Gabriele Bechtel, Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute, USA

Chapter 55
Using CMC in Order to Investigate the Language System.......................................................... 866
Elke Hentschel, University of Berne, Switzerland

Chapter 56
Computational and Engineering Issues in Human Computer Interaction Systems for Supporting Communication in African Languages........................................................................ 876
Tunji Odejobi, University College Cork, Ireland
Tunde Adegbola, African Languages Technology Initiative, Nigeria

Compilation of References .............................................................................................................. 890