Acknowledgment

I would first like to thank my co-editors for their enthusiasm, professionalism, and support.

Technology Leadership in Teacher Education: Integrated Solutions and Experiences
Chris Penny, West Chester University of Pennsylvania, USA
Joanne Leight, Slippery Rock University of Pennsylvania, USA
Sally Winterton, West Chester University of Pennsylvania, USA

Technology Implementation and Teacher Education: Reflective Models
Ronald Lombard, Chatham University, USA
Joseph Kush, Duquesne University, USA
Jay Hertzog, Slippery Rock University of Pennsylvania, USA (retired)

They worked well as a team to co-develop the two books, and then to review and to fine-tune the respective books.

This book could not have been made possible without a group of dedicated reviewers. Their expertise and dedication ensured the quality and the integrity of the double-blind review process.

Mary C. Dalmau, Victoria University, Australia
Chinwe Ikpeze, St. John Fisher College, USA
Stella C. S. Porto, University of Maryland University College, USA
Lisa Marie Blaschke, University of Maryland University College, USA
Richard Altenbaugh, Slippery Rock University of Pennsylvania, USA
Padma Anand, Slippery Rock University of Pennsylvania, USA
Marty J. Park, Office of Education Technology, Kentucky Department of Education, USA
Lawrence Tomei, Robert Morris University, USA

I would also like to thank Dr. Richard Altenbaugh of Slippery Rock University of Pennsylvania. This book and Technology Implementation and Teacher Education: Reflective Models, were the first books that I edited. I depended on his experience as a journal editor when I wrote rejection messages that encouraged authors to keep up with their scholarship even though their chapters did not appear in the books. Finally, I would like to thank Mr. Tyler Heath and Ms. Julia Mosemann of IGI-Global for the tireless support they have provided.

Junko Yamamoto, Editor
August 2009, Slippery Rock, Pennsylvania