As with any project of this type, we wish to thank the many people who supported and contributed to this project. We appreciate the many fine articles submitted to us, including those we were unable to publish. In the review process, the publication rate was 32%.

We thank the members of our editorial board.

Jeremiah P. Conway, University of Southern Maine
Charles D. Dziuban, University of Central Florida
Em Griffin, Wheaton College
Heather Kanuka, University of Alberta
Ryan Kelsey, Columbia University
Matthew A. Killmeier, University of Southern Maine
Judith C. Lapadat, University of Northern British Columbia
Lynnett G. Leonard, University of Nebraska at Omaha
Raymind E. Schroeder, University of Illinois at Springfield
John Sherblom, University of Maine
Karen Swan, Kent State University
Lesley A. Withers, Central Michigan University

We appreciate the review assistance provided by Tamera K. Dirks, Park University and J. Mark Noe of Park University for their administrative and computer support during this process.

Professor Shedletsky thanks Laura Woods and Alice O. Goodwin for their help in carrying out research with him. Professor John Broida, Department of Psychology, University of Southern Maine has been supportive in every way he could. Thank you Professor Jerry Conway, Department of Philosophy, University of Southern Maine, for challenging my ideas when they ought to be challenged and for always being supportive. Thanks to my wife, Cathie Whittenburg and my children, Noah and Jo Temah, for listening to me, putting up with my writing habits and offering feedback on my ideas. I am indebted to the University of Southern Maine for awarding me the Russell Chair for 2009-2011, which gave me greater opportunity to develop ideas on discussion. Finally, I thank my brother, Bernie Sheldon, who encouraged me to question and to see the humor in our selves.

We appreciate the help from IGI, particularly our editorial staff of Beth Ardner and Christine Bufton.

It is our hope that by laying out these cases on online discussion and interaction, these experiences and outcomes, we are providing the soil in which to grow our understanding of how online discussion works. These cases teach us to pay attention to “who” “speaks,” to “whom,” “why,” “when,” “through what channel,” with “what level of critical thinking,” “against what framework,” and with “what intrapersonal and interpersonal dynamics operating.”

Leonard Shedletsky, University of Southern Maine
Joan E. Aitken, Park University
Editor