Acknowledgment

This book is the result of the collaboration across time and space of a vast network of talented individuals. I am grateful for their dedication, vision, and commitment to bringing the knowledge and experience in this volume to life.

Thank you to all of the contributing authors for sharing their research and experiences to further the field of telementoring. Their practical guidance and visionary perspective of the possibilities that telementoring offers will propel those who engage in this practice into new and richer online mentoring partnerships.

My thanks to the members of my Editorial Advisory Board: Larry Tomei, Roderick Sims, Laurie Dringus, Connie Moss, Dave Carbonara, Judi Harris, and Kevin O’Neill. You have my deepest thanks for your service.

I am deeply grateful to my dedicated reviewers who gave helpful feedback to each author. To Larry Tomei, Dave Carbonara, Joyce Yukawa, Robin Hastings, Laurie Dringus, Roderick Sims, Sheryl Bergstahler, Shellie Hipsky, Sandy Watson, Kevin O’Neill, Connie Moss, David Parker, Sharon McCurdy Smith, Judi Harris, Katharine Hill, Joe Timmons, Carole Duff, Rosemary Mautino, Matt Maurer, Carmit-Noa Shpigelman, and Susie McLaughlin, I extend my deepest thanks for your careful reviews and conscientious attention to detail.

To Peg Boyle Single, I give my heartfelt appreciation for writing the foreword for this book. Peg is a pioneer in the field of telementoring and is deeply supportive of the on-going efforts to enrich the practice which this book offers. Her wisdom, experience, and vision are gratefully welcomed. Her words set the tone so eloquently for this book. Thank you, Peg!

As the final chapters came into being, my second set of proofreading eyes sprang into action. Lindsay McGuirk, our fantastic graduate assistant at Duquesne University, provided the fine-tooth comb look to make sure that all t’s were crossed and all i’s were dotted. She was able to give attention to these chapters when her schedule was jam-packed. I am deeply appreciative of her timely help and her every-present cheerfulness. Lindsay, thank you!

I had the wonderful opportunity and joy to work with two editorial assistants at IGI Global. Tyler Heath started out on this journey with me. Tyler was always available at the sending of an email or the dialing of a phone. His ready guidance and helpful advice were always appreciated. When he moved on to the journal division of IGI Global, I was placed in the very capable hands of Christine Bufton who has followed this journey to its completion. Christine was ever-helpful with any questions that I had. Her beneficial advice and timely support has been very much appreciated. Whether by email or phone, she has helped to guide this ship into harbor with grace and ease. I am deeply thankful for the support and guidance that Tyler and Christine have provided throughout the completion of this book.
I extend my thanks to our readers who will take this book to heart and use the wisdom contained within to promote the use of telementoring. May the work and words of these individuals inspire you to take telementoring to the next level in your practice.

Deborah A. Scigliano
Duquesne University, USA