Table of Contents

Foreword ............................................................................................................................ xiii

Preface ........................................................................................................................................ xvi

Acknowledgment .................................................................................................................... xxi

Section 1
Telementoring: Implications for Practice

Chapter 1
Designs for Curriculum-Based Telementoring ................................................................. 1
  Judi Harris, College of William and Mary, USA

Chapter 2
Dimensions of Design in K-12 Telementoring Programs: A Discussion for Designers and Teachers ....................................................................................................................... 15
  Kevin O’Neill, Simon Fraser University, Canada

Chapter 3
Telementoring and Project-Based Learning: An Integrated Model for 21st Century Skills .................. 31
  Joyce Yukawa, St. Catherine University, USA

Chapter 4
You Had to be There: Improving a Telementoring Program through Classroom Observation .......... 57
  Kevin O’Neill, Simon Fraser University, Canada
  Sheryl Guloy, Simon Fraser University, Canada

Chapter 5
The Transformative Capacity of Telementoring on Self-Efficacy Beliefs: A Design-Based
  Perspective .......................................................................................................................... 72
  Deborah A. Scigliano, Duquesne University, USA
Section 2
Telementoring: Addressing the Needs of Persons with Disabilities

Chapter 6
Fully Including Students, Teachers, and Administrators with Disabilities in Telementoring
Sheryl Burgstahler, University of Washington, USA
Terrill Thompson, University of Washington, USA

Chapter 7
Electronic Mentoring in the Classroom: Where Mentors and Students are Persons with Disabilities
Carmit-Noa Shpigelman, University of Haifa, Israel
Patrice L. (Tamar) Weiss, University of Haifa, Israel
Shunit Reiter, University of Haifa, Israel

Chapter 8
Meeting the Needs of Adolescents and Young Adults with Disabilities: An E-Mentoring Approach
Katharine Hill, St. Catherine University, USA & University of St. Thomas, USA
Joe Timmons, University of Minnesota, USA
Christen Opsal, University of Minnesota, USA

Section 3
Telementoring: Professional Development

Chapter 9
Telementoring in Teacher Education
Sandy White Watson, University of Tennessee at Chattanooga, USA

Chapter 10
Virtual Mentoring: A Response to the Challenge of Change
Thomas T. Peters, South Carolina’s Coalition for Mathematics & Science, USA
Terrie R. Dew, Anderson Oconee Pickens Greenville Regional S'MART Center, USA

Chapter 11
Telementoring and Virtual Professional Development: A Theoretical Perspective from Science on the Roles of Self-Efficacy, Teacher Learning, and Professional Learning Communities
Matthew J. Maurer, Robert Morris University, USA
Section 4
Telementoring: Web 2.0 Technologies

Chapter 12
An Orientation to Web 2.0 Tools for Telementoring ................................................................. 206
Robin Hastings, Missouri River Regional Library, USA

Chapter 13
Web 2.0 for Tele-Mentoring ........................................................................................................... 215
Shari McCurdy Smith, University of Illinois at Springfield, USA
Najmuddin Shaik, University of Illinois Urbana-Champaign, USA
Emily Welch Boles, University of Illinois at Springfield, USA

Compilation of References ........................................................................................................... 254

About the Contributors .................................................................................................................. 284

Index ............................................................................................................................................. 289