Acknowledgment

The authors would like to acknowledge the contribution of the many people without whose help and patience this book would not have been possible. It is not possible to name them all, so the absence of a particular mention should not imply a lack of appreciation.

First we would like to thank the authors from many countries and academic and business areas who have contributed their time and expertise to create a series of chapters that will, it is hoped, provide a varied and informative range of views on the conjoint topics of knowledge management and innovation. Without their work, there would not be a book to add to the body of knowledge in this interesting and important area.

Our special thanks go to the editorial team at IGI Global, especially Christine Bufton and Hannah Abelbeck, both of whom have shown great patience and support throughout the lengthy process of editing of the book. Thanks to their care and diligence, any faults in the book are purely the work of the editors.

On the personal side, Lorna would like to thank her family for supporting her. She would also like to give thanks to God for His Grace throughout the period.

Alan Eardley
Staffordshire University, UK

Lorna Uden
Staffordshire University, UK