Acknowledgment

An anthology such as this requires the hard work and input of many people not just the contributing authors: publishers and their staff, the Foreword author, the Editorial Advisory Board, and the reviewers. Each chapter has been exhaustively blind reviewed by two leading academics in the field and I would like to thank each and every one of them for their tireless work in support of this project: Thomas Apperley (University of New England, Australia), Roger Jackson (University of Bolton, England), Martin Knakkergaard (University of Aalborg, Denmark), Don Knox (Glasgow Caledonian University, Scotland), Theo van Leeuwen (University of Technology Sydney, Australia and member of the Editorial Advisory Board), David Moffat (Glasgow Caledonian University, Scotland), Patrick Quinn (Glasgow Caledonian University, Scotland), and Gareth Schott (University of Waikato, New Zealand and member of the Editorial Advisory Board). My thanks too to Dave Ranyard of Sony Computer Entertainment Europe Ltd. for his flattering foreword and my appreciation for the guidance and patience shown towards me by Joel Gamon of IGI Global. Finally, I must extend my apologies to my contributors and fellow authors for the hectoring they were subjected to by the editor: The end surely justifies the means.

Mark Grimshaw
University of Bolton, UK.