Section 1
Teaching Agent-Based Systems within Computing

Chapter 1
MAgICS: Toward a Multi-Agent Introduction to Computer Science............................................... 1
  Forrest Stonedahl, Northwestern University, USA
  Michelle Wilkerson-Jerde Northwestern University, USA
  Uri Wilensky Northwestern University, USA

Chapter 2
An Intelligent Agents and Multi-Agent Systems Course Involving NetLogo................................. 26
  Ilias Sakellariou, University of Macedonia, Greece
  Petros Kefalas, CITY College, Greece
  Ioanna Stamatopoulou, CITY College, Greece

Chapter 3
Adapting Rewards to Encourage Creativity ....................................................................................... 51
  F. Grove, University of Tulsa, USA
  N. Jorgenson, University of Tulsa, USA
  B. Brummel, University of Tulsa, USA
  S. Sen, University of Tulsa, USA
  R. Gamble, University of Tulsa, USA

Chapter 4
A Multiagent Approach to Teaching Complex Systems Development............................................. 70
  Simon C. Lynch University of Teesside, UK
  Keerthi Rajendran University of Teesside, UK
Section 2
Teaching Agent-Based Systems beyond Computing

Chapter 5
Introducing AI and IA into a Non Computer Science Graduate Programme ........................................ 89

Ioanna Stamatopoulou CITY College, Greece
Maria Fasli University of Essex, UK
Petros Kefalas CITY College, Greece

Chapter 6
Introducing Multiagent Systems to Undergraduates through Games and Chocolate ..................... 101

Emma Bowring University of the Pacific, USA
Milind Tambe University of Southern California, USA

Section 3
Using Agent Systems in Educational and Training Contexts:
Educational Uses of Multi-User Virtual Environments

Chapter 7
Survey of Educational Multi-User Virtual Environments and Agents .............................................. 116

Arda Tezcan, Macquarie University, Australia
Debbie Richards, Macquarie University, Australia

Chapter 8
A Comparative Study of Platforms for Multi-User Virtual Environments ....................................... 137

Arda Tezcan, Macquarie University, Australia
Debbie Richards, Macquarie University, Australia

Section 4
Using Agent Systems in Educational and Training Contexts: Specific Issues and Solutions

Chapter 9
Agents with a Theory of Mind in Virtual Training ................................................................. 172

Maaike Harbers, Utrecht University, The Netherlands
Karel Van den Bosch, TNO Human Factors, The Netherlands
John-Jules Meyer, Utrecht University, The Netherlands

Chapter 10
Computers Can Feel Too: Intelligent Emotional Agents in E-Learning Systems .......................... 188

K. Chatzara, University of Thessaly, Greece
C. Karagiannidis, University of Thessaly, Greece
D. Stamatis Alexander TEI of Thessaloniki, Greece
Chapter 11
Scenario Authoring by Domain Trainers ............................................................................................................. 206

Debbie Richards Macquarie University, Australia
Meredith Taylor Macquarie University, Australia

Chapter 12
Crafting a Personalised Agent-Oriented Mobile E-Learning Platform for Adaptive Third Level Education ................................................................................................................................. 233

Olapeju Latifat Ayoola, University College Dublin, Ireland
Eleni Mangina Phelan, University College Dublin, Ireland

Chapter 13
How to Build up Recommender Agents, Step by Step .............................................................................................. 248

Josep Lluis de la Rosa, University of Girona and Easy Innova, Spain
Albert Trias, University of Girona, Spain
Nicolás Hormazábal, University of Girona and Easy Innova, Spain
Esteve del Acebo, University of Girona, Spain
Miquel Montaner, University of Girona and Strategic Attention Management, Spain

Compilation of References ........................................................................................................................................ 273
