Table of Contents

Foreword ........................................................................................................................................... xlvii
Preface ............................................................................................................................................... xlvix

Volume I

Section I
A Review of Research on Educational Gaming

Chapter I
A Qualitative Meta-Analysis of Computer Games as Learning Tools ........................................ 1
Fengfeng Ke, University of New Mexico, USA

Chapter II
Games, Claims, Genres, and Learning ............................................................................................. 33
Aroutis N. Foster, Michigan State University, USA
Punya Mishra, Michigan State University, USA

Chapter III
Massively Multiplayer Online Role-Play Games for Learning ...................................................... 51
Sara de Freitas, University of Coventry, UK
Mark Griffiths, Nottingham Trent University, UK

Chapter IV
An Investigation of Current Online Educational Games ................................................................. 67
Yufeng Qian, St. Thomas University, USA

Chapter V
Augmented Reality Gaming in Education for Engaged Learning .................................................. 83
Cathy Cavanaugh, University of Florida, USA

Chapter VI
Mobility, Games, and Education ..................................................................................................... 96
Michael A. Evans, Virginia Tech, USA
Chapter VII
Game Interfaces as Bodily Techniques ............................................................... 111
   David Parisi, New York University, USA

Chapter VIII
A Window on Digital Games Interactions in Home Settings ........................ 127
   Elhanan Gazit, H.I.T.-Holon Institute of Technology, Israel

Chapter IX
Enhanced Interaction in Mixed Social Environments .................................. 146
   James Oliverio, Digital Worlds Institute, University of Florida, USA
   Dennis Beck, Digital Worlds Institute, University of Florida, USA

Chapter X
Electronic Gaming in Germany as Innovation in Education ....................... 163
   Andreas Breiter, Institute for Information Management, University of Bremen, Germany
   Castulus Kolo, Macromedia University of Applied Sciences, Munich, Germany

Section II
Educational Gaming in K-12 or Teacher Education Contexts

Chapter XI
A Guide to Integrating COTS Games into Your Classroom ........................... 179
   Richard Van Eck, University of North Dakota, USA

Chapter XII
Productive Gaming and the Case for Historiographic Game-Play ............... 200
   Shree Durga, University of Wisconsin – Madison, USA
   Kurt Squire, University of Wisconsin – Madison, USA

Chapter XIII
Game-Based Historical Learning ................................................................. 219
   Erik Malcolm Champion, Auckland School of Design, Massey University, New Zealand

Chapter XIV
The Role of MMORPGs in Social Studies Education ................................... 235
   Phillip J. VanFossen, Purdue University, USA
   Adam Friedman, Wake Forest University, USA
   Richard Hartshorne, University of North Carolina at Charlotte, USA

Chapter XV
Video Games, Reading, and Transmedial Comprehension ........................... 251
   Brock Dubbles, University of Minnesota, USA
Chapter XVI
COTS Computer Game Effectiveness................................................................. 277
  Carol Luckhardt Redfield, St. Mary’s University, USA
  Diane L. Gaither, Southwest Research Institute, USA
  Neil M. Redfield, John Jay Science and Engineering Academy, USA

Chapter XVII
Teacher Gamers vs. Teacher Non-Gamers....................................................... 295
  Christopher L. James, Russellville City Schools, USA
  Vivan H. Wright, University of Alabama, USA

Chapter XVIII
Using Online Simulation to Engage Users in an Authentic Learning Environment ........................................ 315
  Brian Ferry, University of Wollongong, Australia
  Lisa Kervin, University of Wollongong, Australia

Chapter XIX
Pre-Service Computer Teachers as 3D Educational Game Designers............................................. 331
  Zahide Yildirim, Middle East Technical University, Turkey
  Eylem Kilic, Middle East Technical University, Turkey

Chapter XX
Adolescents Teaching Video-Game Making—Who is the Expert Here?........................................ 345
  Kathy Sanford, University of Victoria, Canada
  Leanna Madill, University of Victoria, Canada

Section III
Educational Gaming in Other Learning Contexts

Chapter XXI
Online Games as Powerful Food Advertising to Children ........................................... 358
  Richard T. Cole, Michigan State University, USA
  Elizabeth Taylor Quilliam, Michigan State University, USA

Chapter XXII
Changing Health Behavior Through Games ...................................................... 370
  Erin Edgerton, Centers for Disease Control and Prevention, USA

Chapter XXIII
An Overview of Using Electronic Games for Health Purposes........................................ 388
  Wei Peng, Michigan State University, USA
  Ming Liu, Michigan State University, USA
Chapter XXIV
MMORPGs and Foreign Language Education................................................................. 402
Yong Zhao, Michigan State University, USA
Chun Lai, Michigan State University, USA

Chapter XXV
A Videogame, a Chinese Otaku, and Her Deep Learning of a Language.................. 422
Kim Feldmesser, University of Brighton, UK

Chapter XXVI
Developing a Serious Game for Police Training........................................................... 451
Ahmed BinSubaih, University of Sheffield, UK
Steve Maddock, University of Sheffield, UK
Daniela Romano, University of Sheffield, UK

Chapter XXVII
Game-Based Learning in Design History................................................................. 478
Barbara Martinson, University of Minnesota, USA
Sauman Chu, University of Minnesota, USA

Volume II

Chapter XXVIII
A Policy Game in a Virtual World................................................................................. 489
Martha Garcia-Murillo, Syracuse University, USA
Ian MacInnes, Syracuse University, USA

Chapter XXIX
Teaching OOP and COP Technologies via Gaming.................................................. 508
Chong-wei Xu, Kennesaw State University, USA

Chapter XXX
Using Games to Teach Design Patterns and Computer Graphics.............................. 525
Pollyana Notargiacomo Mustaro, Universidade Presbiteriana Mackenzie, Brazil
Luciano Silva, Universidade Presbiteriana Mackenzie, Brazil
Ismar Frango Silveira, Universidade Presbiteriana Mackenzie, Brazil

Chapter XXXI
A 3D Environment for Exploring Algebraic Structure and Behavior.......................... 546
Paul A. Fishwick, University of Florida, USA
Yuna A. Park, University of Florida, USA
Chapter XL
Social Psychology and Massively Multiplayer Online Learning Games ............................................ 702
  Clint Bowers, University of Central Florida, USA
  Peter A. Smith, University of Central Florida, USA
  Jan Cannon-Bowers, University of Central Florida, USA

Chapter XLI
Evaluating and Managing Cognitive Load in Games........................................................................... 719
  Slava Kalyuga, University of New South Wales, Australia
  Jan L. Plass, New York University, USA

Chapter XLI
Self-Regulated Learning in Video Game Environments..................................................................... 738
  Nick Zap, Simon Fraser University, Canada
  Jillianne Code, Simon Fraser University, Canada

Chapter XLIII
(Self-) Educational Effects of Computer Gaming Cultures ................................................................. 757
  Johannes Fromme, University of Magdeburg, Germany
  Benjamin Jörissen, University of Magdeburg, Germany
  Alexander Unger, University of Magdeburg, Germany

Chapter XLIV
Experience, Cognition and video Game Play ...................................................................................... 776
  Meredith DiPietro, University of Florida, USA

Chapter XLV
Intertextuality in Massively Multi-Player Online Games .................................................................. 791
  P. G. Schrader, University of Nevada, Las Vegas, USA
  Kimberly A. Lawless, University of Illinois, Chicago, USA
  Michael McCreery, University of Nevada, Las Vegas, USA

Chapter XLVI
Development, Identity, and Game-Based Learning ........................................................................... 808
  Yam San Chee, Nanyang Technological University, Singapore
  Kenneth Y. T. Lim, Nanyang Technological University, Singapore

Chapter XLVII
Play Styles and Learning .................................................................................................................... 826
  Carrie Heeter, Michigan State University, USA
Chapter XLVIII
Playing Roles in the MMORPG Kingdom of Loathing ................................................................. 847
Martin Oliver, London Knowledge Lab, Institute of Education, UK

Chapter XLIX
Exploring Personal Myths from The Sims .................................................................................. 862
Vasa Buraphadeja, University of Florida, USA
Kara Dawson, University of Florida, USA

Section VI
The Psychological Impact of Educational Gaming (Part 2):
Violence, Emotion, Race, Gender, and Culture

Chapter L
Learning Processes and Violent Video Games ............................................................................. 876
Edward L. Swing, Iowa State University, USA
Douglas A. Gentile, Iowa State University, USA
Craig A. Anderson, Iowa State University, USA

Chapter LI
Harnessing the Emotional Potential of Video Games ............................................................... 893
Patrick Felicia, University College Cork, Ireland
Ian Pitt, University College Cork, Ireland

Chapter LII
Gamers, Gender, and Representation ....................................................................................... 911
Diane Carr, University of London, UK
Caroline Pelletier, University of London, UK

Chapter LIII
Gender and Racial Stereotypes in Popular Video Games ....................................................... 922
Yi Mou, Cambridge, MA, USA
Wei Peng, Michigan State University, USA

Chapter LIV
Can the Subaltern Play and Speak or Just be Played With? .................................................... 938
David J. Leonard, Washington State University, USA

Chapter LV
Culturally Responsive Games and Simulations ......................................................................... 956
Colleen Swain, University of Florida, USA

Chapter LVI
Saving Worlds with Video Game Activism ................................................................................. 970
Robert Jones, New York University, USA
Volume III

Section VII
Educational Game Design

Chapter LVII
Conceptual Play Spaces
Sasha A. Barah, Indiana University School of Education, USA
Adam Ingram-Goble, Center for Research on Learning and Technology, USA
Scott Warren, University of North Texas, USA

Chapter LVIII
The Design, Play, and Experience Framework
Brian M. Winn, Michigan State University, USA

Chapter LIX
Revealing New Hidden Curriculum and Pedagogy of Digital Games
Youngkyun Baek, Korea National University of Education, Republic of Korea

Chapter LX
Game Design as a Compelling Experience
Wei Qiu, Michigan State University, USA
Yong Zhao, Michigan State University, USA

Chapter LXI
Gaming Ethics, Rules, Etiquette, and Learning
Laurie N. Taylor, University of Florida, USA

Chapter LXII
Designing Games-Based Embedded Authentic Learning Experiences
Penny de Byl, University of Southern Queensland, Australia

Chapter LXIII
Bridging Game Development and Instructional Design
James Belanich, U.S. Army Research Institute for the Behavioral and Social Sciences, USA
Karin A. Orvis, Old Dominion University, USA
Daniel B. Horn, U.S. Army Research Institute for the Behavioral and Social Sciences, USA
Jennifer L. Solberg, U.S. Army Research Institute for the Behavioral and Social Sciences, USA
Chapter LXIV
GaME Design for Intuitive Concept Knowledge................................................................. 1104

Debbie Denise Resse, Center for Educational Technologies®,
Wheeling Jesuit University, USA

Chapter LXV
Leveraging the Affordances of an Electronic Game to Meet Instructional Goals.............. 1127

Yuxin Ma, University of Louisiana at Lafayette, USA
Douglas Williams, University of Louisiana at Lafayette, USA
Charles Richard, University of Louisiana at Lafayette, USA
Louise Prejean, University of Louisiana at Lafayette, USA

Chapter LXVI
Instructional Game Design Using Cognitive Load Theory................................................. 1143

Wenhao David Huang, University of Illinois, USA
Tristan Johnson, Florida State University, USA

Chapter LXVII
Motivation, Learning, and Game Design......................................................................... 1166

Mahboubeh Asgari, Simon Fraser University, Canada
David Kaufman, Simon Fraser University, Canada

Chapter LXVIII
Designing Games for Learning...................................................................................... 1183

Scott J. Warren, University of North Texas, USA
Mary Jo Dondlinger, University of North Texas, USA

Chapter LXIX
Interaction with MMOGs and Implications for E-Learning Design................................. 1204

Panagiotis Zaharias, University of the Aegean, Greece & Athens University of Economics and Business, Athens, Greece
Anthony Papargyris, Athens University of Economics and Business, Greece

Chapter LXX
Narrative Development and Instructional Design............................................................. 1218

Douglas Williams, University of Louisiana at Lafayette, USA
Yuxin Ma, University of Louisiana at Lafayette, USA
Charles Richard, University of Louisiana at Lafayette, USA
Louise Prejean, University of Louisiana at Lafayette, USA
Chapter LXXI
Children as Critics of Educational Computer Games Designed by Other Children........................................ 1234
  Lloyd P. Rieber, The University of Georgia, USA
  Joan M. Davis, The University of Washington, USA
  Michael J. Matzko, Independent Consultant, USA
  Michael M. Grant, The University of Memphis, USA

Chapter LXXII
Video-Game Creation as a Learning Experience for Teachers and Students........................................ 1257
  Leanna Madill, University of Victoria, Canada
  Kathy Sanford, University of Victoria, Canada

Section VIII
The Future of Educational Gaming

Chapter LXXIII
The Future of Digital Game-Based Learning ................................................................................................. 1274
  Brian Magerko, Georgia Institute of Technology, USA

Chapter LXXIV
Artists in the Medium ................................................................................................................................. 1289
  Kurt Squire, University of Wisconsin – Madison, USA

Chapter LXXV
The Positive Impact Model in Commercial Games ................................................................................... 1303
  Rusel DeMaria, DeMaria Studio, USA

Chapter LXXVI
Education and Exploitation Off the Virtual Train to Oregon ................................................................... 1318
  Chad M. Harms, Iowa State University, USA

Section IX
Appendix: Glossary of Terms

Appendix A
An Overview of Gaming Terminology: Chapters I-LXXVI ........................................................................ 1333
  Clark Aldrich, SimuLearn, USA
  Joseph C. DiPietro, University of Florida, USA
Section X
Appendix: Selected Readings

Appendix B, Selected Readings
Games and Simulations: A New Approach in Education? ................................................................. 1354
  Göknur Kaplan Akilli, Pennsylvania State University, USA

Appendix C, Selected Readings
Developing Enjoyable Second Language Learning Software Tools: A Computer Game Paradigm ................................................................. 1372
  Chee Siang Ang, City University, UK
  Panayiotis Zaphiris, City University, UK

Appendix D, Selected Readings
Game Mods: Customizable Learning in a K16 Setting ...................................................................... 1390
  Elizabeth Fanning, The University of Virginia, USA

Appendix E, Selected Readings
Online Games for 21st Century Skills ................................................................................................. 1400
  Lisa Galarneau, University of Waikato, New Zealand
  Melanie Zibit, Boston College, USA

Appendix F, Selected Readings
Game-Based Instruction in a College Classroom ............................................................................... 1427
  Nancy Sardone, Seton Hall University, USA
  Roberta Devlin-Scherer, Seton Hall University, USA
  Joseph Martinelli, Seton Hall University, USA

Appendix G, Selected Readings
Creative Remixing and Digital Learning: Developing an Online Media Literacy Learning Tool for Girls .............................................................................. 1440
  Renee Hobbs, Temple University, USA
  Jonelle Rowe, Department of Health and Human Services, USA

Appendix H, Selected Readings
Learning While Playing: Design Implications for Edutainment Games ........................................... 1449
  Kalle Jegers, Umeå University, Sweden
  Carlotta Wiberg, Umeå University, Sweden
Appendix I, Selected Readings
Reliving History with “Reliving the Revolution”: Designing Augmented Reality Games to Teach the Critical Thinking of History .......................................................... 1460
  Karen Schrier, MIT, USA

Appendix J, Selected Readings
Insights into the Impact of Social Networks on Evolutionary Games .................................................. 1477
  Katia Sycara, Carnegie Mellon University, USA
  Paul Scerri, Carnegie Mellon University, USA
  Anton Chechetka, Carnegie Mellon University, USA