The book that you are about to read was devised in 2009, when IGI Global gave us the possibility of editing a book on the field of Conversational Agents and Natural Language Interaction from the most practical side with techniques and effective practices in use. We would like to express our most sincere gratitude to IGI Global for offering us this possibility.

The project of creating a book is a huge task which requires the effort of many people. This is the reason why we would like to thank the professionals of IGI Global who have helped us during the whole project, the authors who have answered our call and provided high quality chapters (the book would be nothing without your excellent contributions), and the Editorial Advisory Board who has promptly reviewed the assigned chapters and provided comments to assist the authors through the versions of their chapters.

We would also like to thank you as a reader of this book, which we hope you find interesting and useful for your research and studies.
