Foreword ........................................................................................................................................... xiii

Preface ................................................................................................................................................ xvi

Section 1
Foundations and Design

Chapter 1
Moving to the World[virtual]: Affordances of 3D Immersive Environments for Teaching and Learning .......... 1
Richard E. Riedl, Appalachian State University, USA
Terry W. McClannon, Appalachian State University, USA
Amelia Cheney, Appalachian State University, USA

Chapter 2
Learning as Immersive Experience: Learning and Teaching Practices in Virtual Worlds ....................... 15
Sara de Freitas, Coventry University, UK
Ian Dunwell, Coventry University, UK
Genaro Rebolledo-Mendez, University of Veracruz, Mexico

Chapter 3
Relating Pedagogical and Learning Space Designs in Second Life .......................................................... 31
Ahmad John Reeves, The Open University, UK
Shailey Minocha, The Open University, UK

Section 2
Presence and Pedagogy

Chapter 4
In the Presence of Avatars: What Makes Virtual Teachers and Learners Seem (Un)Real? ...................... 61
Brock S. Allen, San Diego State University, USA
Sabine Lawless-Reljic, San Diego State University, USA
Chapter 5
Developing Educational Leadership in Graduate Students through Cross-Program Collaboration in a 3D Immersive Environment

Barbara B. Howard, Appalachian State University, USA
Nita J. Matzen, Appalachian State University, USA
John H. Tashner, Appalachian State University, USA

Chapter 6
At the Intersection of Learning: The Role of the Academic Library in 3D Environments

Nita J. Matzen, Appalachian State University, USA
Louise Ochoa, Appalachian State University, USA
Geraldine Purpur, Appalachian State University, USA

Section 3
Applications of Activity Theory

Chapter 7
Design of a Learning Activity in Second Life: Active Teaching of Social Educators

Judith Molka-Danielsen, Molde University College, Norway
Susan Balandin, Molde University College, Norway

Chapter 8
Communication through Avatars in E-Learning Contexts

Philippe Bonfils, Université du Sud Toulon-Var, France

Chapter 9
Analyzing the Design of Telecollaboration in Second Life Using Activity Theory

Mats Deutschmann, Umeå University, Sweden
Judith Molka-Danielsen, Molde University College, Norway
Luisa Panichi, Pisa University, Italy

Section 4
Applications of Other Constructivist Models

Chapter 10
Playing in a New Key, in a New World: Virtual Worlds, Millennial Writers, and 3D Composition

Joe Essid, University of Richmond, USA

Chapter 11
3D Collaborative Virtual Environment to Support Collaborative Design

Mohd Fairuz Shiratuddin, The University of Southern Mississippi, USA
Alen Hajnal, The University of Southern Mississippi, USA
Chapter 12
Learning Language through Immersive Story Telling in a 3D Virtual Environment .................. 211
Seng-Chee Tan, Nanyang Technological University, Singapore
Yin-Mei Wong, Nanyang Technological University, Singapore

Chapter 13
The Introduction of a Problem Based Learning Approach to the Implementation of a Virtual Reality Context ................................................................................................................. 226
Anthony Williams, The University of Newcastle, Australia
Ning Gu, The University of Newcastle, Australia
Leman Gul, International University of Sarajevo, Bosnia and Herzegovina

Section 5
New Models for Constructivist Learning

Chapter 14
Contemporary Theory for Immersive Worlds: Addressing Engagement, Culture, and Diversity .......... 248
Eric B. Bauman, University of Wisconsin, USA
I. Alex Games, Michigan State University, USA

Chapter 15
What are Avatars Made of? Fictive Worlds and the Zone of Regulatory Development .................. 271
Kenneth Y. T. Lim, National Institute of Education, Singapore

Chapter 16
Worlds in the Making: Embedded Post-Constructivism, Katamari-Style Learning, and the Secret Life of Software ......................................................................................................................... 288
Bob King, University of North Carolina School of the Arts, USA
