Table of Contents

Preface.................................................................................................................................................. vii

Acknowledgment........................................................................................................................................ xv

Section 1

The Global Blogosphere: Political, Cultural, Legal, and Ethical Issues

Chapter 1

Blogs as a Source of Democratic Deliberation.................................................................................. 1

Barbara K. Kaye, University of Tennessee Knoxville, USA

Thomas J. Johnson, University of Texas Austin, USA

Peter Muhlberger, Texas Tech University, USA

Chapter 2

The Blogosphere in the “Land of Smiles”: Citizen Media and Political Conflict in Thailand .......... 19

Melissa Wall, California State University - Northridge, USA

Treepon Kirdnark, Bangkok University, Thailand

Chapter 3

Fame, Fantasy, Fanfare and Fun: The Blossoming of the Chinese Culture of Blogmongering ........ 37

Zixue Tai, University of Kentucky, USA

Chapter 4

The Funhouse Mirror: The Blogosphere’s Reflection of Women’s Sports.......................................... 55

Marie Hardin, Pennsylvania State University, USA

Bu Zhong, Pennsylvania State University, USA

Thomas F. Corrigan, Pennsylvania State University, USA

Chapter 5

Civility or Censorship? An Examination of the Reaction to a Proposed Code of Conduct for Bloggers ................................................................. 72

Gwen L. Shaffer, University of California, USA
Section 2
Blogs and Blogging: Case Studies

Chapter 6
Getting Schooled: Basketball Blog KnickerBlogger.Net as a Case Study ..................................................... 91
Anastacia Kurylo, Marymount Manhattan College, USA
Michael Kurylo, KnickerBlogger.Net, USA

Chapter 7
Rebels, Heretics, and Exiles: Blogging among Estranged and Questioning American Hasidim .... 108
Naomi Gold, Samford University, USA

Chapter 8
The Status of Blogging in the Republic of Ireland: A Case Study ................................................................. 128
Lori F. Brost, Central Michigan University, USA
Carol McGinnis, Central Michigan University, USA

Chapter 9
Blogging for Sovereignty: An Analysis of Palestinian Blogs ................................................................. 148
Justin D. Martin, The University of Maine, USA
Sherine El-Toukhy, The University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, USA

Chapter 10
Blogging as a Means of Grieving ................................................................. 161
Jocelyn M. DeGroot, Southern Illinois University, USA
Heather J. Carmack, Missouri State University, USA

Section 3
Analyzing Blogs: Approaches and Perspectives

Chapter 11
Lynne M. Webb, University of Arkansas, USA
Tiffany E. Fields, University of Arkansas, USA
Sitthivorada Boupha, University of Arkansas, USA
Matthew N. Stell, University of Arkansas, USA

Chapter 12
Blogging Motivations for Latin American Bloggers: A Uses and Gratifications Approach .............. 200
Jenny Bronstein, Bar-Ilan University, Israel

Chapter 13
The First Amendment’s Impact on Bloggers: A Legal Perspective ......................................................... 216
Joshua Azriel, Kennesaw State University, USA
Chapter 14
Analyzing Blogs: A Hermeneutic Perspective................................................................. 231
    Richard Fiordo, University of North Dakota, USA

Chapter 15
Social Interaction Technologies and the Future of Blogging.......................................... 249
    Tatyana Dumova, Point Park University, USA

About the Contributors ..................................................................................................... 275

Index............................................................................................................................... 281