Acknowledgment

This book was mostly inspired by the experiences when I worked in the Bank of Japan (BOJ) for more than two decades. For much of that period, I was involved in the financial stability side rather than in the monetary policy side. There, the payment system was one of the main issues of concern. My superiors and colleagues guided me in the right direction.

From 2003 to 2005, I had the chance to work for the Bank for International Settlements (BIS), my colleagues at the Committee on Payment and Settlement Systems (CPSS) gave me some invaluable advice and innovative ideas.

As a member of Secretariat of CPSS, I met several CPSS members who were directors of central banks in charge of payment system. Through the discussion with these thoughtful central bankers, I could get several new perspectives on payment systems.

The following is the list of people whom I am particularly grateful to. Without their direct and indirect effect and contributions, this book would not come out.

Alan Taylor, EBA Clearing
Daniela Russo, European Central Bank
Dieter Becker, European Central Bank
Esmond Lee, Hong Kong Monetary Authority
Hansjörg Nymphius, Deutsche Bank
Hans-Jürgen Friederich, Deutsche Bundesbank
Iwao Kuroda, Chuo University (former BOJ)
Jean-Michel Godeffroy, European Central Bank
Jeffrey Marquardt, FRB
Jochen Metzger, Deutsche Bundesbank
John Trundle, Bank of England
Jonathan Butterfield, CLS Group
Lawrence Radecki, Federal Reserve Bank of New York
Lawrence Sweet, FRB
Marc Hollanders, BIS
Patrick Parkinson, FRB
Robert Lindley, BIS
Tommaso Padoa-Schioppa, European Central Bank
Vincent De Santis, CHIPS
Yoshiharu Oritani, Meiji University (former BOJ)
Yvon Lucas, Bank of France

Finally, I am grateful to Ms. Julia Mosemann of IGI Global for her continuing and professional support.