The editors would like to acknowledge the help of all involved in the production and review process of the handbook, without whose support the project could not have been completed. We are grateful to the twelve members of the Editorial Board whose willingness to embrace the project has been very motivational for us and whose recommendations helped us to shape the structure and content of this handbook.

Thanks go to all the reviewers who provided constructive and critical feedback on submissions and engaged in an important dialogue on the themes of the book. Many of the authors of chapters included in this handbook also served as referees for chapters written by other authors. However, some of the reviewers must be mentioned for their willingness to step in and respond to our requests for their opinion and feedback: Philip Barker of Teesside University, Frances Bell of Salford University, Elli Georgiadou of Middlesex University, and Ursula Wingate and Lesley Gourlay of King’s College London.

Special thanks also go to the publishing team at IGI Global, whose contributions throughout the whole process from inception of the initial idea to final publication have been more than helpful.

We would like to thank Jennifer Preece of the University of Maryland for embracing the values of the book in her engaging foreword. We would also like to thank Ian Kinchin of King’s College who read a draft of the preface and provided helpful suggestions for enhancing its content. And last but not least, our partners and friends for their unfailing support and encouragement during the months it took to produce this book.

In closing, we wish to thank all of the authors for their insights and contribution to knowledge that gave birth to this handbook.
