Table of Contents

Foreword ........................................................................................................................................... xviii

Preface ................................................................................................................................................ xix

Acknowledgment .............................................................................................................................. xxiv

Section 1
The Changing Nature of Relationships: Who is Interacting and How Do They Interact?

Chapter 1

Sejung Marina Choi, University of Texas, USA

Shu-Chuan Chu, DePaul University, USA

Yoojung Kim, University of Texas, USA

Chapter 2
e-Matchmaker, e-Matchmaker, Make Me a Match: Indian Matrimonial Services in the Internet Age......................................................................................................................... 17

Archana Krishnan, University of Connecticut, USA

Chapter 3
Playing “Nice”: What Online Gaming Can Teach Us about Multiculturalism........................................ 32

Melinda Jacobs, Level Up Media, The Netherlands

Chapter 4
Social Information Processing Theory (SIPT): A Cultural Perspective for International Online Communication Environments ........................................................................................................... 45

Bolanle A. Olaniran, Texas Tech University, USA

Natasha Rodriguez, Texas Tech University, USA

Indi M. Williams, Arizona State University, USA
Chapter 5
Filtering Online Content in China

Jyh-An Lee, National Chengchi University, Taiwan

Chapter 6
Culture, Online Technology, and Computer-Mediated Technical Documentation:
Contributions from the Field of Intercultural Communication

Marc Hermeking, Ludwig-Maximilians University, Germany

Chapter 7
Communicating in the Age of Web 2.0: Social Networking Use among Academics in Turkey

Tanfer Emin Tunc, Hacettepe University, Turkey
Esin Sultan Oguz, Hacettepe University, Turkey

Chapter 8
Knowing Through Asynchronous Time and Space: A Phenomenological Study of Cultural Differences in Online Interaction

Ping Yang, Denison University, USA

Chapter 9
Cultural Differences in Social Media Usage and Beliefs and Attitudes Towards Advertising on Social Media: Findings from Dubai, United Arab Emirates

Sara Kamal, American University in Dubai, UAE
Shu-Chuan Chu, DePaul University, USA

Section 2
The Emerging Trends in Representation: Who May Participate and How Do Individuals Present Themselves?

Chapter 10
Discursive Manipulation Strategies in Virtual Scams in Global Contexts

Rotimi Taiwo, Obafemi Awolowo University, Nigeria

Chapter 11
Government Monitoring of Online Media and Its Influence on Netizens’ Language Use in China

Wengao Gong, Nanyang Technological University, Singapore

Chapter 12
Irish Identification as Exigence: A Self-Service Case Study for Producing User Documentation in Online Contexts

Andrew Mara, North Dakota State University, USA
Miriam Mara, North Dakota State University, USA
Chapter 13
Studying Online Communication Features on International and Cross-Cultural Web Pages
Using Websphere Analysis Methodology ................................................................. 187
Kathryn Stam, State University of New York Institute of Technology, USA
Indira Guzman, TUI University, USA
Dennis Thoryk, Onondaga Community College, USA

Chapter 14
Minimizing Cultural Differences Using Ontology-Based Information Retrieval System .......... 200
Myongho Yi, Texas Woman’s University, USA

Chapter 15
Information Sharing Across Languages ........................................................................ 215
Reinhard Schäler, University of Limerick, Ireland

Chapter 16
Linguistic Minorities on the Internet ........................................................................... 235
Jaffer Sheyholislami, Carleton University, Canada

Chapter 17
The Emerging Hispanic Use of Online Health Information in the United States:
Cultural Convergence or Dissociation? ........................................................................ 251
Nicole St. Germaine-McDaniel, Angelo State University, USA

Chapter 18
Language as Social Practice on the Chinese Internet ............................................... 266
Elaine J. Yuan, University of Illinois at Chicago, USA

Section 3
The New Context for Education: Who are the Students and How are They Taught?

Chapter 19
Cultural Considerations of Online Pedagogy ............................................................ 283
Judith N. Martin, Arizona State University, USA
Pauline Hope Cheong, Arizona State University, USA

Chapter 20
Communicating Pragmatics About Content and Culture in Virtually Mediated Educational Environments ............................................................................................................. 312
Birthe Mousten, Aarhus University, Denmark
John Humbley, Université Paris—Denis Diderot, France
Bruce Maylath, North Dakota State University, USA
Sonia Vandepitte, Hogeschool Gent/University of Ghent, Belgium
Chapter 21
Using the Cultural Challenges of Virtual Team Projects to Prepare Students for Global Citizenship .................................................................................................................. 328
  Madelyn Flammia, University of Central Florida, USA

Chapter 22
Studying Locally, Interacting Globally: Demographic Change and International
Students in Australian Higher Education ........................................................................... 344
  Angela T. Ragusa, Charles Sturt University, Australia
  Emma Steinke, Charles Sturt University, Australia

Chapter 23
Computer-Mediated Cross-Cultural Communication: Creating Cultural Exchange through Articulated Studies .................................................................................................. 369
  William Klein, University of Missouri - St. Louis, USA
  Bernard E. La Berge, Modern College of Business and Science, UAE

Chapter 24
New Era, New Media, and New Strategies for Cross-Cultural Collaborative Learning .......... 381
  Chun-Min Wang, National Hsinchu University of Education, Taiwan
  Jinn-Wei Tsao, University of Georgia, USA
  Gretchen Bourdeau Thomas, University of Georgia, USA

Chapter 25
Maximizing Multicultural Online Learning Experiences with the Social Presence Model,
Course Examples, and Specific Strategies ........................................................................... 395
  Aimee L. Whiteside, University of Wisconsin - Stout, USA
  Amy E. Garrett Dikkers, University of North Carolina at Wilmington, USA

Chapter 26
Language Abilities and Culture Clashes in Cyberspace: Potential Problems for ESL/EFL Students in Hybrid Mainstream Classes ............................................................... 414
  Anna M. Harrington, Edison State College, USA

Chapter 27
International Collaboration and Design Innovation in Virtual Worlds: Lessons from Second Life ....................................................................................................................... 429
  Pete Rive, Victoria University of Wellington, New Zealand
  Aukje Thomassen, Auckland University of Technology, New Zealand