Acknowledgment

The editors of the book express their deep gratitude to the many people who provided crucial contributions to the success of this project. We will not try to provide a conclusive list at this point since the list is too long and there is a high risk that the many authors would forget a valuable contributor. Rather, the editors would like to mention a few names as examples of what it takes to compile a thirty chapter handbook for a scientific field that is still in the process of taking shape. It all starts with the research cooperation network that makes it possible to generate the “wealth-of-knowledge” accumulated in the present book. Special thanks are directed to all the colleagues involved, such as Kurt Rothermel (University of Stuttgart, Germany) and Terry Winograd (Stanford University), to people from closely cooperating institutions like Eurécom in France (Ernst Biersack, Ulrich Finger, Bernard Mérialdo, and others), and to those colleagues from SAP Research and from the Telecooperation Group at Technische Universität Darmstadt who did not contribute to the book directly as authors. The editors are deeply grateful to the various peer reviewers for their detailed work, to Piklu Gupta for proofreading, and to Karin Tillack, Elke Halla, and Dimitri Belski for their administrative support. Last but not least, this book would not have happened without the support of the editors’ families, patiently waiting for the last page to be finished.
