Barbara K. Lipman Early Childhood School and Research Institute. The Barbara K. Lipman Early Childhood School and Research Institute under the direction of Sandra Turner-Brown is located on the University of Memphis campus. This school is partially supported through the Lipman Foundation, contributions, tuition, and the College of Education. Without the collaboration of this school and teachers we would never be able to conduct our research. These professionals and the children and parents of Lipman are our lifeline to research, practice, and intellectual stimulation for our work. We want to acknowledge their support, expertise, contributions, and patience with us as we continue to write. These extraordinary professionals are identified below.

Sandra Brown Turner: My history with Lipman School dates back to 1975 when I did my student teaching here and then in 1986-1987 when I was honored to be a graduate assistant. Before becoming the Director of Lipman School in July 2000, I was a tenured Associate Professor of Early Childhood Education at Southwest Tennessee Community College. I have served on numerous local, state, regional, and national boards, task forces, committees, and presented workshops or keynotes all over the United States. I am published in a variety of professional journals with a particular interest in the development of spirituality in young children. It is my joy to come here each day and see the growth and development of the children, their families, and their teachers.

Carol Cordeau Young: I have been a Supervising Teacher at Lipman School since 1995. I received my undergraduate degree in 1982 from Saint Bonaventure University, New York, and I hold a Master’s degree in Early Childhood Education Special Education from Saint Joseph College, West Hartford, Connecticut. I have taught in a variety of programs such as Science Museum of Connecticut Nursery School and the Martha O’Bryan Center in Nashville, TN. I present workshops and in-service training for local, state, and national early childhood professional groups. In addition to publishing articles on curriculum and parenting, my interests include reflective practice and science.

Jan Kidder: I am a native Texan and received my undergraduate degree from the University of Dallas in 1976. After receiving my Master’s degree from Vanderbilt University in 1979, I adopted Tennessee as home and I have been teaching in Memphis ever since. I hold an American Montessori Society Pre-Primary certificate from Memphis Montessori Institute, and have taught in Montessori schools, Memphis City Schools, and adjunct for Southwest Tennessee Community College. I have been the Supervising Teacher in the Montessori I classroom at Lipman School since 2000.
Harmony Swenson: I am a native Memphian and my husband and I have a two-year-old daughter. I received my B.S. Ed. in early childhood education in 1999 here at the University of Memphis. After teaching with Memphis City Schools and Shelby County Schools I was pleased to come in 2001 as the kindergarten teacher and become a part of the unique and magical environment of Lipman School. I am currently pursuing my Master’s degree in Instruction and Curriculum Leadership.

Jodie Friedman: I have been a Supervising Teacher at Lipman School since January, 2006, just after completing my student teaching assignment and finishing my M.A.T. at the University of Memphis (May, 2006). I received my B.S. in Business Administration from Boston University in May, 2003. It was then that I knew that I wanted to be a teacher of young children. I believe that children learn best while actively engaged in a comfortable learning environment; I work daily to achieve this in my classroom.

Erin King: I have a long history with Lipman School. My journey began many when I attended Lipman as a kindergartner. I believe my early experiences in this caring and creative environment set the stage for my later academic and artistic pursuits. I returned to the University of Memphis as a young adult and earned a B.F.A. After pursuing different venues for a career, I decided to return to the University to earn a Master’s Degree in Early Childhood Education. While working on my M.A.T., I was fortunate to be a Graduate Assistant at Lipman School. In the 2007-08 school year I became Lipman’s first atelierista/art teacher. I found that I could combine my art background and my knowledge of developmentally appropriate practice. I became the Preschool II Supervising Teacher the next year which I thoroughly enjoy. I continue to develop my own artistic yens and am an active artist in the Memphis community.

Odette Patrikios: I was born in Zimbabwe, Africa, and attended business school and later immigrated to the United States with my husband and children. I joined the university several years ago and have been at Lipman School since 2003. Since becoming a staff member at the U of M I have received the university’s Outstanding Customer Service Award and was a nominee for the College of Education’s Dean’s Excellence Award for Support Staff.

Thank you Lipman.

We would also like to acknowledge Candice Burkett, Harley McGee, and Dulcenia Franklin Blake for their support and patience during the development and writing of this book.
