Healthcare Information Systems and Informatics: Research and Practices

Table of Contents

Preface ........................................................................................................................................... viii

Section I: HISI Theoretical Development

Chapter I
Designing a M-Health Framework for Conceptualizing Mobile Health Systems ................................................................. 1
  Phillip Olla, Madonna University, USA
  Joseph Tan, Wayne State University, USA

Chapter II
Factors Motivating the Acceptance of New Information and Communication Technologies in UK Healthcare:
A Test of Three Models ........................................................................................................................................ 25
  Janice A. Osbourne, Brunel University, UK
  Malcolm Clarke, Brunel University, UK
Chapter III
An Overview of the HIPAA-Compliant Privacy Access Control Model ................................................................. 40
Vivying S.Y. Cheng, Hong Kong University of Science and Technology, Hong Kong
Patrick C.K. Hung, University of Ontario Institute of Technology (UOIT), Canada

Section II:
HISI Methodological Approaches

Chapter IV
The Internet and Managing Boomers and Seniors’ Health ......................... 68
Christopher G. Reddick, The University of Texas at San Antonio, USA

Chapter V
Data Mining Medical Information: Should Artificial Neural Networks be Used to Analyze Trauma Audit Data ......................... 92
Thomas Chesney, Nottingham University Business School, UK
Kay Penney, Napier University, UK
Peter Oakley, The University Hospital of North Staffordshire, UK
Simon Davies, University of Birmingham Research Park, UK
David Chesney, Freeman Hospital, UK
Nicole Maffulli, Keele University of Medicine, UK
John Templeton, Keele University of Medicine, UK

Chapter VI
Diagnostic Cost Reduction Using Artificial Neural Networks: The Case of Pulmonary Embolism ........................................... 108
Steven Walczak, University of Colorado at Denver, USA
Bradley B. Brimhall, Tricore Reference Library, USA & University of New Mexico, USA
Jerry B. Lefkowitz, Weill Cornell College of Medicine, USA

Chapter VII
Information Technology in Primary Care Practice in the United States ............................................................... 131
James G. Anderson, American College of Medical Informatics, USA & Purdue University, USA
E. Andrew Balas, Old Dominion University, USA
Chapter VIII
A Case Study of Health Information Systems Adoption:
An Adaptive Structuration Theory Approach .............................................. 164
Dana Schwieger, Southeast Missouri State University, USA
Arlyn Melcher, Southern Illinois University, USA
Raganathan Chandrasekaran, University of Illinois at Chicago, USA
H. Joseph Wen, Southeast Missouri State University, USA

Chapter IX
Understanding Physicians’ Acceptance of Computerized Physician Order Entry .................................................................................... 185
Huigang Liang, Temple University, USA
Yajiong Xue, East Carolina University, USA
Xiaocheng Wu, Jiangyin People’s Hospital, P.R. of China

Chapter X
Entrepreneurial IT Governance in a Rural Family Practice Residency Program .............................................................................................................. 202
Carla Wiggins, Idaho State University, USA
John C. Beachboard, Idaho State University, USA
Kenneth Trimmer, Idaho State University, USA
Lela “Kitty” Pumphrey, Zayad University–Abu Dhabi, UAE

Chapter XI
Telehealth Organizational Implementation Guideline Issues: A Canadian Perspective ........................................................................................................ 224
Maryann Yeo, University of Calgary, Canada
Penny A. Jennett, University of Calgary, Canada

Chapter XII
Computer Usage by U.S. Group Medical Practices 1994 vs. 2003 and Type of Usage Comparison to IT Practices in Taiwan ............................................. 255
Marion Sobol, Southern Methodist University, USA
Edmund Prater, University of Texas at Arlington, USA

Section III:
HISI Implementation, Evaluation, and Practices

Chapter XIII
Decentralization of the Greek National Telemedicine System ................... 278
Ioannis Apostolakis, National School of Public Health, Greece
Periklis Valsamos, Greek Ministry of Health and Social Solidarity, Greece
Iraklis Varlamis, Athens University of Economy and Business, Greece
Chapter XIV
Perceived Level of Benefits and Risk Core Functionalities of an EHR System

Diane C. Davis, Southern Illinois University–Carbondale, USA
Minal Thakkar, Southern Illinois University–Carbondale, USA

Chapter XV
Using Pocket PCs for Nurses’ Shift Reports and Patient Care

Karen Chang, Purdue University, USA
Kyle D. Lutes, Purdue University, USA
Melanie L. Braswell, Purdue University, USA
Jacqueline K. Nielsen, Purdue University, USA

Chapter XVI
Evaluation of a Tool to Enhance Searching for Useful Medical Information on the Internet

David Parry, Auckland University of Technology, New Zealand

Section IV: HISI Policies and Knowledge Transfer Processes

Chapter XVII
Applying Personal Health Informatics to Create Effective Patient-Centered E-Health

E. Vance Wilson, The University of Toledo, USA

Chapter XVIII
The Impact of Certification on Healthcare Information Technology Use

Neset Hikmet, University of South Florida, USA
Anol Bhattacherjee, University of South Florida, USA

Chapter XIX
The Competitive Forces Facing E-Health

Nilmini Wickramasinghe, Stuart Graduate School of Business, USA
Santosh Misra, Cleveland State University, USA
Arnold Jenkins, Johns Hopkins Hospital, USA
Douglas R. Vogel, City University of Hong Kong, China
Chapter XX
From Theory to Practice: Healthcare Technology Management (HCTM) Conceptualization, Measures, and Practices........ 392
George Eisler, BC Academic Health Council, Canada
Joseph Tan, Wayne State University, USA
Samual Sheps, University of British Columbia, Canada

About the Contributors ........................................................................................................ 417

Index........................................................................................................................................ 424