Table of Contents

Foreword..............................................................................................................................................vii
Preface...................................................................................................................................................ix
Acknowledgment...................................................................................................................................xvii

Section 1
Literature Review

Chapter 1
Students’ Views about Learning with Technologies: A Literature Review................................. 1
  Kathryn Moyle, Charles Darwin University, Australia
  Guus Wijngaards, InHolland University, The Netherlands
  Susanne Owen, University of South Australia, Australia

Section 2
USA and Canada

Chapter 2
New Technologies, New Horizons: Graduate Student Views on Creating Their Technological
Pedagogical Content Knowledge (TPACK) .......................................................................................... 23
  Hiller A. Spires, North Carolina State University, USA
  Meixun Zheng, North Carolina State University, USA
  Manning Pruden, North Carolina State University, USA

Chapter 3
What are Alberta’s K-12 Students Saying about Learning with Technologies? .......................... 42
  Bette Gray, Alberta Education, Canada
  Karen Andrews, Alberta Education, Canada
  Susan Schroeder, Learning Cultures Consulting Inc., Canada
Section 3
Australia and Asia

Chapter 4
“A Community of Opinion and Debate”: Postgraduate Students’ Reactions to Compulsory Online Discussions ................................................................. 69

  Elizabeth A. Beckmann, The Australian National University, Australia

Chapter 5
Learning in a Virtual World: Student Perceptions and Outcomes .................................................. 91

  Sue Gregory, University of New England, Australia

Chapter 6
Student Voices and Digital Technologies in Australian School Education ..................................... 117

  Bernard Brown, University of Canberra, Australia

Chapter 7
Learning with Technologies: Perceptions and Outcomes in China ............................................. 142

  Anne Campbell, University of Canberra, Australia

Section 4
Europe

Chapter 8
Views of Students on Learning with Technologies in Dutch Education and Training .................. 164

  Pieter Swager, Inholland Centre for eLearning, The Netherlands
  Jeroen Bottema, Inholland Centre for eLearning, The Netherlands

Chapter 9
Perceptions of Marginalized Youth on Learning through Technologies ....................................... 180

  Jean Johnson, Inclusion Trust, UK
  Jonny Dyer, Inclusion Trust, UK
  Ben Lockyer, Inclusion Trust, UK

Chapter 10
Students’ Views of E-Learning: The Impact of Technologies on Learning in Higher Education in Ireland ................................................................. 204

  Eileen O’Donnell, Trinity College Dublin, Ireland & Dublin Institute of Technology, Ireland
  Mary Sharp, Trinity College Dublin, Ireland
Chapter 11
Study and Non-Study Related Technologies use of Flemish Students in Higher Education........... 227

Steven Bruneel, Katholieke Universiteit Leuven, Belgium
Jan Elen, Katholieke Universiteit Leuven, Belgium
Kurt De Wit, Katholieke Universiteit Leuven, Belgium
Jef C. Verhoeven, Katholieke Universiteit Leuven, Belgium

Chapter 12
Social Learning Sites? Using Students’ Views to Explore the Use and Possibilities of Facebook for Educational Purposes in Flanders................................................................. 249

Mathias Decuyper, University of Leuven, Belgium
Steven Bruneel, University of Leuven, Belgium

Chapter 13
The Transfer Value of Successful Learning Practices Using Web 2.0........................................ 269

Jos Fransen, Inholland University of Applied Sciences, The Netherlands
Bas van Goozen, Inholland University of Applied Sciences, The Netherlands

About the Contributors ........................................................................................................... 291

Index................................................................................................................................. 297