With gratitude, love, and respect we thank the following people without whom the book would not have come to fruition. To our publisher, IGI Global, who supported this project and, particularly Kristin Roth and Meg Stocking who provided constant support during a challenging process. To Larry Leifer for agreeing to pen the foreword, allowing us to take advantage of his years of experience and insight in the field. A special note of thanks also to our contributors who were so kind as to share their expertise in a reviewing role, showing their commitment to producing a high quality book as opposed to merely focusing on their own chapters. To all those working to expand and enhance scientific knowledge in the field of virtual teams and creativity, and who have contributed—and continue to do so—to the development of guidelines to achieve more efficient and effective management. And last but not least, (from Steven) to Pamela for her continual support. I hope to reverse that role as you re-start your own creative journey soon. And (from Teresa) to my creative sons, Arnau and Jordi, who have made my life a fascinating journey.
