Acknowledgment

Writing a book is a long and far from solitary process, and involves the advice, support and help of many more individuals than the list of authors suggests. As such, we would like to acknowledge the help of all who were involved during the writing and publication process.

Firstly, we would like to thank the staff and students of the Institute of Art, Design and Technology, Dun Laoghaire Ireland. Their support, encouragement and inspiration were integral to the successful completion of this book. In particular, we would like to thank Dr. Irene Connolly, who helpfully advised on appropriate literature for inclusion in the sections on cyberbullying.

Special thanks also go to the publishing team at IGI Global, whose contributions throughout the whole process from inception of the initial idea to final publication have been invaluable. In particular we would like to thank Kristin Klinger, Erika Carter and Jan Travers, who guided us through the early stages of proposal reviews and who saw the potential of book before it was even written. Special thanks to Michael Killian whose friendly emails and responses to our queries assisted us in keeping this project on schedule.

It’s difficult when writing such a long document to see the commas for the semi-colons, and we are grateful to Siobhán and Paul Dolan for proof-reading an early version of this book.

The preparation of a manuscript also requires the patience and support of family members, who tolerated our lack of sociability and absence at family events. So thank you to both our families for their interest and encouragement over the past two years, and particular thanks to Glen and Eleanor for their support and understanding.

Finally, we would like to thank all those who encouraged us in this project throughout its development. If it was a detailed discussion regarding a particular concept, or just a coffee to help to clear our heads, we’re grateful.

This book is dedicated to the memories of our fathers, David Power and Liam Kirwan.
