Table of Contents

Foreword............................................................................................................................................xvii
Preface................................................................................................................................................xix
Acknowledgment................................................................................................................................xxv

Section 1
Theories and Concepts

Chapter 1
Developing Faculty to Integrate Innovative Learning into Their Practice with the SOLE Model....... 1
Simon Paul Atkinson, BPP University College, UK

Chapter 2
The Gloss and the Reality of Teaching Digital Natives: Taking the Long View......................... 19
Star A. Muir, George Mason University, USA

Chapter 3
Personalized Integrated Educational Systems: Technology for the Information-Age
Paradigm of Education in Higher Education ................................................................................ 41
Charles M. Reigeluth, Indiana University, USA
William R. Watson, Purdue University, USA
Sunnie Lee Watson, Ball State University, USA

Chapter 4
Frustration Vaccination? Inoculation Theory and Digital Learning ........................................ 61
Josh Compton, Dartmouth College, USA

Chapter 5
Face to Face Communication outside the Digital Realm to Foster Student
Growth and Development ............................................................................................................. 74
Charles F. Aust, Kennesaw State University, USA
Section 2
Theory and Practice

Chapter 6
Millennials are Digital Natives? An Investigation into Digital Propensity and Age ......................... 90
  Boaventura DaCosta, Solers Research Group, USA
  Carolyn Kinsell, Solers Research Group, USA
  Angelique Nasah, Solers Research Group, USA

Chapter 7
Net Geners’ Multi-Modal and Multi-Tasking Performance in Complex Problem Solving ............ 107
  Robert Z. Zheng, University of Utah, USA

Chapter 8
Interactivity and Its Effect on Student Learning Outcomes ....................................................... 129
  James P. Gleason, Eastern Kentucky University, USA
  Laura Beth Daws, Georgia Highlands College, USA

Chapter 9
Engaging the Digitally Engaged Student: Comparing Technology-Mediated
Communication Use and Effects on Student Learning ............................................................. 150
  Scott C. D’Urso, Marquette University, USA
  Craig R. Scott, Rutgers University, USA

Section 3
Social Media for Digital Learners

Chapter 10
Critical Insights: Net Generation, Wikis, and Group Collaboration ........................................ 172
  Maureen Ebben, University of Southern Maine, USA
  Russell Kivatisky, University of Southern Maine, USA
  Daniel A. Panici, University of Southern Maine, USA

Chapter 11
Using Blogs to Overcome the Challenges of a Research Methods Course ............................ 190
  Susanne S. Croasdaile, Virginia Commonwealth University, USA
  Rachel Angel, Virginia Commonwealth University, USA
  Erin Carr, Virginia Commonwealth University, USA
  Lucy Hudson, Virginia Commonwealth University, USA
  Carin Ursey, Virginia Commonwealth University, USA
Chapter 12
Using an Anywhere/Anytime Technology to Facilitate Student Writing ................................. 213
  Hilary Wilder, William Paterson University, USA
  Carrie Eunyoung Hong, William Paterson University, USA
  Geraldine Mongillo, William Paterson University, USA

Chapter 13
A Cross-Disciplinary Exploration of Web 2.0 Technologies to Enhance Critical
Thinking and Collaboration ........................................................................................................... 228
  Marsha M. Huber, Youngstown State University, USA
  Jean P. Kelly, Otterbein University, USA
  Shirine Mafi, Otterbein University, USA

Chapter 14
Empowering 21st Century Learners through Personal Learning Networks ................................. 249
  Shannan H. Butler, St. Edward’s University, USA
  Corinne Weisgerber, St. Edward’s University, USA

Chapter 15
Leveraging Multicommunication in the Classroom: Implications for Participation and Engagement............................................................................................................................. 269
  Keri K. Stephens, University of Texas at Austin, USA
  Melissa Murphy, University of Texas at Austin, USA
  Kerk F. Kee, Chapman University, USA

Chapter 16
New Media and Digital Learners: An Examination of Teaching and Learning............................. 289
  William J. Gibbs, Duquesne University, USA

Section 4
Pedagogy and Technology for the Net Generational Classroom

Chapter 17
Action Learning: Inspire Lasting Learning through Truly Applied Projects.................................. 311
  Scott P. Roberts, University of Maryland, USA
  Steven G. Buzinski, University of Maryland, USA

Chapter 18
The Net Generation Illusion: Challenging Conformance to Social Expectations .......................... 324
  Rachel Ellaway, Northern Ontario School of Medicine, Canada
  Janet Tworek, University of Calgary, Canada
Chapter 19
Utilizing Audio and Video Captures to Train and Engage the Net Generation in Effective Presentation Skills ........................................................................................................340
Jessica Fargnoli, Bergen Community College, USA

Chapter 20
Service-Learning as a Pedagogical Approach for Net Generation Learners: A Case Study 358
Sally Blomstrom, Embry-Riddle Aeronautical University, USA

Chapter 21
Teaching with PowerPoint in the Net Generation ........................................................................374
Chris Gurrie, University of Tampa, USA
Brandy Fair, Grayson County College, USA

Chapter 22
Integrating Personal Experiences and Course Materials to Promote Net Generation Student Learning in an Online Health Communication Course ........................................................... 393
Rukhsana Ahmed, University of Ottawa, Canada

Afterword........................................................................................................................................409

Compilation of References ........................................................................................................411

About the Contributors ........................................................................................................448

Index................................................................................................................................................458